

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

The Religious State.

TOGETHER WITH A SHORT TREATISE ON THE VOCATION TO THE PRIESTHOOD

TRANSLATED FROM THE ITALIAN
OF
ST. ALPHONSUS DE LIGUORI,
Doctor of the Church.

EDITED BY
REV. EUGENE GRIMM, C.S.S.R.

SECOND EDITION.

NEW YORK, CINCINNATI, CHICAGO:
BENZIGER BROTHERS,
Printers to the Holy Apostolic See.

Copyright, 1889, by BENZIGER BROTHERS.

X D5

L72

174018

CONTENTS.

THE VOCATION TO THE RELIGIOUS STATE.

	PAGE
I. We ought to conform to the designs of God in the choice of a state of life, whatever it may be	5
II. The vocation to the religious state. How important it is to follow it promptly.....	7
1. Misery to which one exposes one's self by not corresponding to it.....	7
2. We must obey the law of God without delay...	11
III. Means to be employed for preserving a religious vocation in the world.....	17
1. Secrecy.....	17
2. Prayer.....	25
3. Recollection.....	26
IV. Dispositions required for entering religion.....	28
1. Detachment from comforts.....	32
2. Detachment from parents.....	34
3. Detachment from self-esteem.....	39
4. Detachment from one's own will.....	43
V. Trials which we must expect to have in religious life.....	48
Remedies in temptation:
First: To have recourse to God.....	49
Second: To have recourse to the Superior.....	51
Conclusion.....	53

CONSIDERATIONS FOR THOSE WHO ARE CALLED TO THE RELIGIOUS STATE.

Con.	I. How the salvation of the soul is secured by entering the religious state.....	57
Con.	II. The happiness of the religious at death..	61
Con.	III. The account that he will have to render to Jesus Christ, on the day of judgment, who does not follow his vocation.....	66
Con.	IV. The torment which in hell shall be the lot of him who is damned for having lost his vocation.....	70
Con.	V. The immense glory that religious enjoy in heaven.....	73

Schulte O. V. 31, 1918. 222 (W)

	PAGE
Con. VI. The peace God gives good religious to enjoy.....	78
Con. VII. The damage done to religious by tepidity	82
Con. VIII. How dear to God is a soul that gives itself entirely to him.....	87
Con. IX. How necessary it is in order to become a saint, to have a great desire for sanctity	91
Con. X. The love we owe Jesus Christ in consideration of the love he has shown to us....	96
Con. XI. The great happiness which religious enjoy in dwelling in the same house with Jesus Christ in the Blessed Sacrament..	101
Con. XII. The life of religious resembles the life of Jesus Christ.....	105
Con. XIII. The zeal which religious ought to have for the salvation of souls.....	109
Con. XIV. How necessary to religious are the virtues of meekness and humility....	113
Con. XV. How much religious should confide in the patronage of Mary.....	117
Exhortation to religious to advance in the perfection of their state.....	121
Answer to a young man who asks counsel on the choice of a state of life.....	128
Advice to a young person in doubt about the state of life she ought to embrace.....	139
Discourse to pious maidens.....	149
Excellence of virginity.....	149
Means to preserve virginal purity.....	159
Conclusion.....	167
A letter to a young student who is deliberating on a choice of a state of life.....	169

THE VOCATION TO THE PRIESTHOOD.

I. Necessity of a divine vocation to take Holy Orders.....	195
II. Marks of a divine vocation to the sacerdotal state.....	200
1. Purity of intention.....	204
2. Science and talents.....	205
3. Positive goodness of character.....	206
III. To what danger one exposes one's self by taking Holy Orders without a vocation.....	212

The Vocation to the Religious State.

COUNSELS CONCERNING THE RELIGIOUS VOCATION.

I. We ought to Conform to the Designs of God in the Choice of a State of Life, whatever it may be.

IT is evident that our eternal salvation depends principally upon the choice of our state of life. Father Granada calls this choice the chief wheel of our whole life. Hence, as when in a clock the chief wheel is deranged the whole clock is also deranged, so, in the order of our salvation, if we make a mistake as to the state to which we are called, our whole life, as St. Gregory says, will be an error.

If, then, in the choice of a state of life we wish to secure our eternal salvation, we must embrace that to which God calls us, in which alone God prepares for us the efficacious means necessary to our salvation. For, as St. Cyprian says: "The grace of the Holy Spirit is given according to the order of God, and not according to our own will" (De Sing. cler.); and therefore St. Paul writes: "Every one hath his proper gift from God" (1 Cor. vii. 7). That is, as Cornelius à Lapide explains it, God gives to every one his vocation, and chooses the state in which he wishes him to be saved. This is the order of predestination described by the same apostle: "Whom he predestinated, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified, . . . and them he also glorified" (Rom. viii. 30).

6 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

We must remark that in the world this doctrine of vocation is not much studied by some persons. They think it to be all the same, whether they live in the state to which God calls them, or in that which they choose of their own inclination, and therefore so many live a bad life and damn themselves.

But it is certain that this is the principal point with regard to the acquisition of eternal life. He who disturbs this order and breaks this chain of salvation will not be saved. With all his labors and with all the good he may do, St. Augustine will tell him: "Thou runnest well, but out of the way;" that is, out of the way in which God has called you to walk for attaining to salvation. The Lord does not accept the sacrifices offered up to him from our own inclination: "But to Cain and his offerings he had no respect" (Gen. iv. 5). He even threatens with great chastisements those who, when he calls them, turn their backs on him in order to follow the whims of their own caprice. "Woe to you, apostate children," he says through Isaias, "that you would take counsel and not of me, and would begin a web and not by my spirit" (Isa. xxx. 1).

II. The Vocation to the Religious State. How Important it is to Follow it Promptly.

1. Misery to which one exposes one's self by not corresponding to it.

THE divine call to a more perfect life is undoubtedly a special grace and a very great one, which God does not give to all; hence he has much reason to be indignant against those who despise it. How greatly would not a prince think himself offended, if he should call one of his vassals to serve him near his person, and this vassal should refuse to obey the call! And should God not resent such conduct? Oh, he resents it but too much, and threatens.

8 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

such persons by saying, "Woe to him that gainsayeth his maker" (Isa. xlv. 9). The word woe in Scripture signifies eternal damnation. The chastisement of the disobedient will begin even in this life, in which he will always be unquiet; for says Job: "Who hath resisted him and hath had peace?" (Job ix. 4.) He will, therefore, be deprived of those abundant and efficacious helps necessary to lead a good life. For which reason Habert, a divine, writes: "He will with great difficulty be able to work out his salvation" (De Ord. p. 3, c. i. § 2). He will with great difficulty save himself, for, being like a member out of its proper place, he will with great difficulty be able to live well. "He will be," adds the learned author, "in the body of the Church like a limb of the human body out of its place, which may be able to perform its functions, but only with difficulty and in an awkward manner" (Ibid.). Whence he concludes: "And though, absolutely speaking, he may be saved, he will with difficulty enter upon and advance in the road, and use the means of salvation" (Ibid.). The same thing is said by St. Bernard¹ and St. Leo.² St. Gregory,³ writing to the emperor Maurice, who by an edict had forbidden soldiers to become religious, says that this was an unjust law, which shut the gates of paradise to many, because many would save themselves in religion who would otherwise perish in the world.

¹ De Vit. Cler. c. 5. ² Epist. 87. ³ Epist. l. 2, c. 100.

Remarkable is the case related by Father Lancicius. There was in the Roman college a youth of great talents. Whilst he was making the spiritual exercises, he asked his confessor whether it was a sin not to correspond with the vocation to the religious life. The confessor answered that in itself it was no grievous sin, because this is a thing of counsel and not of precept, but that one would expose one's salvation to great danger, as it had happened to many who for this reason were finally damned. He did not obey the call. He went to study at Macerata, where he soon began to omit prayer and holy Communion, and finally gave himself up to a bad life. Soon after, coming one night from the house of a wicked woman, he was mortally wounded by a rival; certain priests ran to his assistance, but he expired before they arrived, and, moreover, in front of the college. By this circumstance God wished to show that this chastisement came upon him for having neglected his vocation.

Remarkable also is the vision had by a novice, who, as Father Pinamonti relates in his treatise of the victorious vocation, had resolved on leaving his Order. He saw Christ, on a throne, in wrath ordering his name to be blotted out of the book of life, by which vision he was so terrified that he persevered in his vocation.

10 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

How many other similar examples are there not to be found in books! And how many unhappy youths shall we not see damned on the day of judgment for not having followed their vocation! These are rebels to the divine light, as the Holy Ghost says: "They have been rebellious to the light, they have not known his ways" (Job xxiv. 13); and they will be justly punished by losing the light; and because they would not walk in the way shown them by the Lord, they shall walk without light in that chosen by their own caprice, and perish. In Proverbs the Lord expresses himself with still greater force; each word should be well weighed: "Behold, I will utter my spirit to you" (Prov. i. 23). Behold the vocation; but because they fail to follow it, God adds: "Because I called and you refused . . . you have despised all my counsel. . . . I also will laugh in your destruction, and will mock, when that shall come to you, which you feared" (Ibid. i. 24-26). And this signifies that God will not hear the prayers of him who has neglected to obey his voice. St. Augustine says: "They who have despised the will of God which invited them, shall feel the will of God, when it becomes its own avenger" (R. ad obj. Vinc. 16).

2. We must obey the voice of God without delay.

Whenever God calls any one to a more perfect state, he who does not wish to expose his eternal salvation to great danger must then obey, and obey promptly. Otherwise he will hear from Jesus Christ the reproach which he made to that young man who, when invited to follow him, said: "I will follow thee, Lord, but let me first take my leave of them that are at my house" (Luke ix. 61). And Jesus replied to him that he was not fit for paradise: "No man putting his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God" (Ibid. 62).

The lights that God gives are transient, not permanent gifts. Hence St. Thomas of Aquinas says that the vocation of God to a more perfect life ought to be followed as promptly as possible. The Angelic Doc-tor¹ proposes in his Summa the question whether it be praiseworthy to enter religion without having asked the counsel of many and without long deliberation. He answers in the affirmative, saying that counsel and deliberation are necessary in doubtful things, but not in this matter which is certainly good, because Jesus Christ has counselled it in the Gospel, since the religious state comprehends most of the counsels of Jesus Christ.

12 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

How singular a thing it is, when there is question of entering religion to lead a life more perfect and more free from the dangers of the world, for men of the world to say that it is necessary to deliberate a long time before putting such resolutions in execution, in order to ascertain whether the vocation comes from God or from the devil! But they do not talk thus when any one is to accept of a place in the magistracy, of a bishopric, etc., where there are so many dangers of losing the soul. Then they do not say that many proofs are required whether there be a true vocation from God.

The saints, however, do not talk thus. St. Thomas² says that if the vocation to religion should even come from the devil, ¹ 2. 2. q. 189, a. 10. ² Contra retr. a rel. c. 10.

we should nevertheless follow it as a good counsel, though coming from an enemy. St. John Chrysostom, as quoted by the same St. Thomas, says that God, when he gives such vocations, wills that we should not defer even a moment to follow them.¹ Christ requires from us such an obedience that we should not delay an instant. And why this? Because as much as God is pleased to see in a soul promptitude in obeying him, so much he opens his hand and fills it with his blessings. On the contrary, tardiness in obeying him displeases him, and then he shuts his hand and withdraws his lights, so that in consequence a soul will follow its vocation with difficulty and abandon it again easily. Therefore St. John Chrysostom says that when the devil cannot bring any one to give up his resolution of consecrating himself to God, he at least seeks to make him defer the execution of it, and esteems it a great gain if he can obtain the delay of one day only, or even of an hour (Ad pop. Ant. hom. 56). Because after that day or that hour, other occasions presenting themselves, it will be less difficult for him to obtain greater delay, until the individual who has been thus called, finding himself more feeble and less assisted by grace, gives way altogether and loses his vocation. Therefore St. Jerome gives to those who are called to quit the world this advice: "Make haste, I beseech you, and rather cut than loosen the cable by which your bark is bound fast to the land" (Ad Paulin. de st. Scr.). The saint wishes to say that as a man who should find himself in a boat on the point of sinking would seek to cut the rope, rather than to loosen it, so he who finds himself in the midst of the world ought to seek to get out of it as promptly as possible, in order to free himself from the danger which is so great, in the world, of losing his soul.

¹ In Matth. hom. 14.

14 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

Let us also hear what St. Francis de Sales writes in his works on religious vocation, because the whole of it will go to confirm what has already been said and what will hereafter be said: "To have a sign of a true vocation, it is not necessary that our constancy be sensible, it suffices if it be in the superior part of our soul. And, therefore we must not judge a vocation not to be a true one if the individual thus called, before putting it in execution, does not feel any longer those sensible movements that he felt in the beginning,—even should he feel a repugnance and coldness which sometimes cause him to waver, and make it appear to him that all is lost. It is enough that the will remains constant in not abandoning the divine call, and also that there remains some affection for this call. To know whether God will have him become a religious, one ought not to expect that God himself should speak or send to him an angel from heaven to signify his will. And as little necessary is it that ten or twelve Doctors should examine whether the vocation is to be followed or not. But it is necessary to correspond to the first movement of the inspiration, to cultivate it, and then not to grow weary if disgust or coldness should come on; for if one act thus, God will not fail to make all succeed to his glory. Nor ought we to care much from what quarter the first movement comes. The Lord has many means to call his servants. Sometimes he makes use of a sermon, at other times of the reading of good books. Some, as St. Antony and St. Francis, have been called by hearing the words of the Gospel; others by means of afflictions and troubles that came upon them in the world, and that suggested to them the motive for leaving it. These persons, although they come to God only because they are disgusted with the world or are out of favor with it, nevertheless, failing not to give themselves to him with their whole will become sometimes greater saints than those who entered religion with a more apparent vocation. Father Platus relates that a nobleman, riding one day on a fine horse and striving to make a great display in order to please some ladies whom he saw, was thrown from the horse into the mire, from which he rose besmeared and covered with mud. He was so full of confusion at this accident that at the same moment he resolved to become a religious, saying: 'Treacherous world, thou hast mocked me; but I will mock thee. Thou hast played me a game; I will play thee another, for I will have no more peace with thee, and from this hour I resolve to forsake thee and to become a friar.' And in fact he became a religious and lived in religion a holy life." (Entret. 17.)

16 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

III. Means to be Employed for Preserving a Religious Vocation in the World.

HE, then, who wishes to be faithful to the divine call ought not only to resolve to follow it, but to follow it promptly, if he does not wish to expose himself to the evident danger of losing his vocation; and in case he should by necessity be forced to wait, he ought to use all diligence to preserve it, as the most precious jewel he could have.

The means to preserve vocation are three in number : secrecy, prayer, and recollection.

1. Secrecy.

First, generally speaking he must keep his vocation secret from everybody except his spiritual Father, because commonly the men of the world scruple not to say to young men who are called to the religious state that one may serve God everywhere, and therefore in the world also. And it is wonderful that such propositions come sometimes out of the mouth of priests, and even of religious; but of such religious only as have either become so without vocation, or do not know what vocation is. Yes, without doubt, he who is not called to the religious state may serve God in every place, but not he who is called to it and then from his own inclination wishes to remain in the world : such a one, as I have said above, can with difficulty serve God and lead a good life.

It is especially necessary to keep the vocation secret from parents.

It was, indeed, the opinion of Luther, as Bellarmine¹ relates, that children entering religion without the consent of their parents commit a sin. For, said he, children are bound to obey their parents in all things. But this opinion has generally been rejected by Councils and the holy Fathers. The tenth Council of Toledo expressly says : " It is lawful for children to become religious without the consent of their parents, provided they have attained the age of puberty." These are the words : " It shall not be lawful for parents to put their children in a religious Order after they shall have attained their fourteenth year. After this age, it shall be lawful for children to take upon themselves the yoke of religious observance, whether it be with the consent of their parents, or only the wish of their own hearts" (Can. 24). The same is prescribed in the Council of Tribur, and is taught by St. Ambrose, St. Jerome, St. Augustine, St. Bernard, St. Thomas, and others, with St. John Chrysostom, who writes in general: "When parents stand in the way in spiritual things, they ought not even to be recognized" (In Jo. hom. 84).

¹ De Mon. l. 2, c. 36.

Some Doctors say that when a child called by God to the religious state could easily and securely obtain the consent of his parents, without any danger on their part of hindering him from following his vocation, it is becoming that he should seek to obtain their blessing. This doctrine could be held speculatively, but not so in practice, because in practice such a danger always exists. It will be well to discuss this point fully, in order to do away with certain pharisaical scruples which some entertain.

It is certain that in the choice of a state of life children are not bound to obey parents. Thus the Doctors with common accord teach with St. Thomas, who says: "Servants are not bound to obey their masters, nor children their parents, with regard to contracting matrimony, preserving virginity, and such like things" (2. 2. q. 104, a. 5).

Nevertheless, with regard to the state of marriage, Father Pinamonte, in his treatise on religious vocation, is justly of the opinion of Sanchez, Koning, and others, who hold that a child is bound to take counsel of his parents, because in such matters they may have more experience than the young. But speaking then of religious vocation, the above-mentioned Pinamonte wisely adds that a child is not bound at all to take counsel of his parents, because in this matter they have no experience, and through interest are commonly changed into enemies, as St. Thomas also remarks, when speaking of religious vocation. "Frequently," he says, "our friends according to the flesh are opposed to our spiritual good" (2. 2. q. 189, a. 10). For fathers often prefer that their children should be damned with themselves rather than be saved away. Hence St. Bernard exclaims: "O hard father, O cruel mother, whose consolation is the death of their son, who wish rather that we perish with them than reign without them!" (Epist. 111.)

God, says a grave author quoted by St. Thomas, when he calls one to a perfect life, wishes him to forget his father, saying: "Hearken, O daughter, and see, and incline thy ear, and forget thy people and thy father's house." (Ps. xliv. 11). "By this, then," he adds, "the Lord certainly admonishes us that he who is called ought by no means to allow the counsel of parents to intervene." If God will have a soul who is called by him forget its father and its father's house, without doubt he suggests by this that he who is called to the religious state ought not, before he follows the call, to interpose the counsel of the carnal friends of his household."

St. Cyril, explaining what Jesus Christ said to the youth mentioned above, "No man putting his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God" (Luke ix. 62), comments on it, and says that he who asks for time to confer with his parents in reference to his vocation is exactly the one who is declared by Our Lord to be unfit for heaven. "In order to confer with his parents, he looks back who seeks for delay" (Apud S. Thom. loc. cit.). Hence St. Thomas absolutely advises those who are called to religion to abstain from deliberating on their vocation with their relatives: "From this deliberation the relatives of the flesh are before all to be excluded; for it is said, Treat thy

22 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

'cause with thy friend :¹ but the relatives of the flesh are in this affair not our friends, but our enemies, according to the saying of Our Lord : 'A man's enemies shall be they of his household'² (Contra retr. a rel. c. 9).

If, then, for following one's vocation it would be a great error to ask the counsel of parents, it would be a greater one still to ask their permission, and to wait for it; for such a demand cannot be made without an evident danger of losing the vocation, as often as there is a probable fear that parents would exert themselves to prevent it. And, in fact, the saints, when they were called to leave the world, left their homes without giving their parents so much as an intimation of it. Thus acted a St. Thomas Aquinas, a St. Francis Xavier, a St. Philip Neri, a St. Louis Bertrand. And we know that the Lord has even by miracles approved of such glorious flights.

St. Peter of Alcantara, when he went to the monastery to become a religious, and was fleeing from the house of his mother under whose obedience he had lived since the death of his father, found himself prevented by a wide river from advancing any farther. He recommended himself to God, and at the same instant saw himself transported to the other side. Likewise, when St. Stanislaus Kostka fled from home, without the permission of his father, his brother set out after him in great haste in a carriage, but having almost overtaken him, the horses, in spite of all the violence used against them, would not advance a step farther, till turning towards the city, they began to run at full speed.

¹ Prov. xxv. 9.

² Matt. x. 36.

In like manner, the Blessed Oringa of Waldrano, in Tuscany, being promised in marriage to a young man, fled from the house of her parents in order to consecrate herself to God, but the river Arno opposing itself to her course, after a short prayer she saw it divide and form as it were two walls of crystal, to let her pass through with dry feet.

Therefore, my very beloved brother, if you are called by God to leave the world, be very careful not to make your resolution known to your parents, and, content to be thus blessed by God, seek to execute it as promptly as you can, and without their knowledge, if you would not expose yourself to a great danger of losing your vocation. For, generally speaking, relatives, as was said above, especially fathers and mothers, oppose the execution of such resolutions ; and although they may be endowed with piety, interest and passion, nevertheless, render them so blind, that under various pretexts they scruple not to thwart with all their might the vocation of their children.

We read in the life of Father Paul Segneri the younger that his mother, though a matron much given to prayer, left, nevertheless, no means untried to prevent her son from entering the religious state to which he was called: We also read in the life of Mgr. Cavalieri, Bishop of Troja, that his father, although a man of great piety, used every means to prevent his son from entering the Congregation of Pious Workmen (which, notwithstanding, he afterwards did), and even went so far as to bring against him a lawsuit in the ecclesiastical court. And how many other fathers, although they are men of piety and prayer, have not in such cases been seen to change, and to become possessed, as it were, of the devil ! For hell, it seems, arms itself so much for no other thing than to prevent those who are called to the religious state from executing their resolution.

For this reason, be also very careful not to communicate your design to your friends, who will not scruple to dissuade you from it, or at least divulge the secret, so that the knowledge of it will easily come to the ears of your parents.

2. Prayer.

In the second place, it is necessary to know that these vocations are only preserved by prayer: he who gives up prayer will certainly give up his vocation. It is necessary to pray, and to pray much, and therefore let him who feels himself called not omit to make every morning after rising mental prayer of an hour, or at least of half an hour, in his own room, if he can do so there without molestation, and if not, in the church, and likewise of half an hour in the evening.

Let him not neglect also to make every day without fail a visit to the Most Holy Sacrament, as also to the Most Blessed Virgin Mary, in order to obtain the grace of perseverance in his vocation. Let him likewise not omit to receive holy Communion thrice, or at least twice, a week.

His meditations should almost always be on this point of the vocation, considering how great a favor from God he has received in being thus called by him; how much more easily he will secure his eternal salvation if he be faithful to God in following his vocation; and, on the contrary, to how great a danger of being damned he exposes himself if he be unfaithful. Let him then especially place before his eyes the hour of death, and consider the contentment he will then feel if he shall have obeyed God, and the pains and the remorse he would experience if he should die in the world. To this end, I shall add at the end of this little work some considerations on which he may make his mental prayer.

26 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

It is moreover necessary that all his prayers to Jesus and Mary, and especially those after Communion and in the visits, have for their object to obtain perseverance.

In all his prayers and Communions let him always renew the offering of himself to God, by saying:

“Behold, O Lord, I am no more mine, I am Thine. Already have I given myself to Thee, and now I renew this my offering of my whole self. Accept of me and give me strength to be faithful to Thee, and to retire as quickly as possible into Thy holy house.”

3. Recollection.

In the third place, it is necessary that he be recollected; this will not be possible for him unless he withdraws from worldly conversations and amusements. What, in short, as long as we are in the world, is sufficient to cause the loss of vocation? A mere nothing. One day of amusement, a word from a friend, a passion that we do not mortify, a little attachment, a thought of fear, or a resentment we do not overcome, suffices to bring to naught all our resolutions of retiring from the world, or of giving ourselves entirely to God. Wherefore we ought to keep perfectly recollected, detaching ourselves from everything of this world. We should during this time think of nothing but prayer and frequenting the sacraments, and to be nowhere but at home, and in the church. Let him who will not do so, but distracts himself by pastimes, be persuaded that he will without doubt lose his vocation. He will remain with the remorse of not having followed it, but he certainly will not follow it. Oh, how many by neglecting these precautions have lost, first, their vocation, and afterwards their souls!

IV. Dispositions required for Entering Religion.

HE who feels himself to be called by God to an Order of exact observance (I say of exact observance, for it would be better for him to remain in the world than to enter an Order which is relaxed), should know that the end of every Order of exact observance is to follow as exactly as possible the footsteps and examples of the most holy life of Jesus Christ, who led a life entirely detached and mortified, full of suffering and contempt. He, then, who resolves to enter such an Order must at the same time resolve to enter it for the sake of suffering and denying himself in all things, as Jesus Christ himself has declared to those who wish perfectly to follow him: "If any man will come after me let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. xvi. 24). He, then, who wishes to enter such an Order must firmly establish within himself this resolution to suffer, and to suffer much, so that afterwards he may not give way to temptations, when, having entered, he shall feel depressed under the hardships and privations of the poor and mortified life which is there led.

Many, on entering Communities of exact observance, take not the proper means of finding peace therein, and of becoming saints, because they place before their eyes only the advantages of the Community life, such as the solitude, the quiet, the freedom from the troubles caused by relatives, from strife and other disagreeable matters, and from the cares consequent on being obliged to think of one's lodgings, food, and clothing.

There is no doubt that every religious is only too much indebted to his Order, which delivers him from so many troubles, and thus procures for him so great a facility to serve God perfectly in peace, continually furnishing him with so many means for the welfare of his soul, so many good examples from his companions, so much good advice from his Superiors, who watch for his benefit, so many exercises conducive to eternal salvation. All this is true; but with all this he must also, in order not to be deprived of so blessed a lot, resolve to embrace all the sufferings that he may, on the other hand, meet with in the Order; for if he does not embrace them with love, he will never obtain that full peace which God gives to those who overcome themselves : " To him that overcomes I will give the hidden manna" (Apoc. ii. 17). For the peace which God gives his faithful servants to taste is hidden, nor is it known by the men of the world, who, seeing their mortified life, know not how to envy them, but pity them and call them the unhappy ones of this earth. But "they see the cross, the unction they do not see," says St. Bernard (In Dedic. s. 1). They see their mortification, but they do not see the contentment God gives them to enjoy.

It is true that in the spiritual life one has to suffer, but, says St. Teresa, when one resolves to suffer, the pain is gone. Nay, the pains themselves turn into joy. " My daughter," so the Lord said one day to St. Bridget, " the treasure of my graces seems to be surrounded with thorns, but for him who overcomes the first stings, all changes itself into sweetness." And then those delights which God gives to his beloved souls to enjoy in their prayers, in their Communions, in their solitude; those lights, those holy ardors and embraces, that quiet of conscience, that blessed hope of eternal life,—who can ever understand them if he does not experience them ? " One drop of the consolations of God," said St. Teresa, "is worth more than all the consolations and the pleasures of the world." Our most gracious God knows well how to give to him who suffers something for his sake, even in this valley of tears, the experience of the foretaste of the glory of the blessed ; for in this is properly verified that which David says : "Thou who framest labor in commandment" (Ps. xciii. 20). In the spiritual life, God, announcing pains, tediousness, death, seems to frame labor, but, in fact, afterwards it is not so ; for the spiritual life brings to them who entirely give themselves to God that peace which, as St. Paul says, "surpasseth all understanding" (Phil. iv. 7). It surpasses all the pleasures of the world and of worldlings. Hence we see a religious more content in a poor cell than all the monarchs in their royal palaces. "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is sweet" (Ps. xxxiii. 9).

But, on the other hand, he must be persuaded that he who does not resolve to suffer and to overcome himself in the things contrary to his inclinations will never be able to enjoy this true peace, though he should have already entered religion. "To him that overcometh I will give the hidden man" (Apoc. ii. 17). It is, then, necessary that he who wishes to be admitted into an Order of exact observance should enter with a mind determined to overcome himself in everything, by expelling from his heart all inclinations and desires that are not from God, nor for God, so that he must detach himself from all things, and especially from the four following: 1. From his comforts; 2. From his parents; 3. From his self-esteem; 4. From his own will.

32 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

1. Detachment from comforts.

In religion, after the year of novitiate, one makes, besides the vows of chastity and obedience, also the vow of poverty, in consequence of which one can never possess anything as one's individual property, not even a pin, no rents, no money, nor other things. The Order will provide him with all that he needs.

But the vow of poverty does not suffice to make one a true follower of Jesus Christ, if one does not afterwards embrace with joy of spirit all the inconveniences of poverty. "Not poverty, but the love of poverty is a virtue" (Epist. 100), says St. Bernard; and he means to say that for one to become a saint, it is not enough to be poor only, if one does not love also the inconveniences of poverty. "Oh, how many would wish to be poor and similar to Jesus Christ!" says Thomas à Kempis; "they wish to be poor, but without any want,"—but so that they be in want of nothing. In a word, they would wish the honor and the reward of poverty, but not the inconveniences of poverty.

It is easy to understand that in religion no one will seek for things that are superfluous,—clothes of silk, costly food, furniture of value, and the like; but he may desire to have all things that are necessary, and these he may be unable to procure. For then it is that he gives proof that he truly loves poverty, when things that are needful, such as his necessary clothing, bed-covering, or food, happen to be wanting and yet he remains content and is not troubled. And what kind of poverty would that be to suffer, if he were never in want of anything necessary? Father Balthasar Alvarez says that in order truly to love poverty, we must also love the effects of poverty; that is, as he enumerates them, cold, hunger, thirst, and contempt (Life, ch. 5).

In religion, every one should not only be content with that which is given to him, without ever asking for anything of which, through the neglect of the officials, he should be in want,—this would be a great defect,—but he should also prepare himself sometimes to bear the want even of those simple things that the Rule allows. For it may happen that sometimes he is in want of clothes, coverings, linen, or such like things, and then he has to be satisfied with the little that has been given him, without complaining or being disquieted at seeing himself in want even of what is necessary. He who has not this spirit, let him not think of entering religion, because this is a sign that he is not called thereto, or that he has not the will to embrace the spirit of the Institute. He who goes to serve God in his house should consider that he is going not to be well treated for God, but to suffer for God.

34 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

2. Detachment from parents.

He who wishes to enter religion must detach himself from his parents and forget them altogether. For, in religious houses of exact observance, detachment from parents is put in practice in the highest degree, in order perfectly to follow the doctrine of Jesus Christ, who said: "I came not to send peace, but the sword; I came to set a man at variance with his father.

and the daughter against her mother" (Matt. x. 34), and then added the reason: "A man's enemies shall be they of his own household" (Ibid. 36). This is especially the case, as has been remarked above, in this point of religious vocation: when there is question of any one leaving the world, there are no worse enemies than parents who, either through interest or passion, prefer to become enemies of God by turning their children away from their vocation rather than to give their consent to it. Oh, how many parents shall we see in the valley of Josaphat damned for having made their children or nephews lose their vocation; and how many youths shall we see damned who, in order to please their parents and by not detaching themselves from them, have lost their vocation and afterwards their souls! Hence Jesus declares to us: "If any man hate not his father, etc., he cannot be my disciple" (Luke xiv. 26). Let him, then, who wishes to enter a religious Order of perfect observance, and to become a true disciple of Jesus Christ, resolve to forget his parents altogether.

When any one has already entered religion, let him remember that he must practise then the same detachment from parents. Let him know that he cannot go to visit his parents in their own house, except in the case of some dangerous illness of his father or mother, or of some other urgent necessity, though always with the permission of the Superior. Otherwise, to go to the house of one's parents without the most express permission, would be considered in religion as a most notable and scandalous fault. In religion it is also considered as a great defect even to ask permission or to show a desire of seeing parents or of speaking with them.

36 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

St. Charles Borromeo said that when he visited the house of his parents he always, after his return, found himself less fervent in spirit. And thus let him who goes to the house of his parents by his own will and not through a positive obedience to his Superiors, be persuaded that he will leave it either under temptation or will be less fervent.

St. Vincent of Paul could only be induced once to visit his country and his parents, and this out of pure necessity; and he said that the love of home and country was a great impediment to his spiritual progress. He said also that many, on account of having visited their country, had become so tender towards their relatives that they were like flies which, being once entangled in a cobweb, cannot extricate themselves from it. He added: "For that one time that I went, although it was for a short time only, and though I took care to prevent in my relatives every hope of help from me, yet I felt at leaving them such a pain that I ceased not to weep all along the road, and was for three months harassed by the thought of coming to their aid. At last, God in his mercy took that temptation from me" (Vie, par Ab. l. 3, ch. 39).

Let him know, moreover, that no one may write to his parents without permission, and without showing the letter to the Superior. Otherwise, he would be guilty of a most grievous fault which is not to be tolerated in religion, and should be punished with severity; since from this might come a thousand disorders tending to destroy the religious spirit. Let especially the newcomer know that during the novitiate this is observed with the greatest rigor; for novices during their year of novitiate do not easily obtain permission to talk to their parents, or to write to them.

Finally, let him know that, in case a subject should become sick, it would be a notable defect to ask or to show an inclination to go to his own house for his restoration to health, under the plea of being better taken care of, or of enjoying the benefit of his native air. The air of his own country becomes almost always, or even always, hurtful and pestilential to the spirit of the subject. And if he should ever say that he wishes to be cured at home in order not to subject the Order to expenses for remedies, let him know that the Order has charity enough to take sufficient care of the sick. As to the change of air, the Superiors will think of that; and if the air of one house is not beneficial to him, they will send him to another. And as for remedies, they will even sell the books, if need be, to provide for the sick. And so let him be sure that divine Providence will not fail him. And if the Lord should decree against his recovery, he should conform himself to the will of God, without even mentioning the word "home." The greatest grace that he who enters an Order can desire is to die, when God wills it, in the house of God, assisted by the brethren of his Order, and not in a secular house in the midst of his relatives.

38 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation

3. Detachment from self-esteem.

He must also be altogether detached from all self-esteem. Many leave their country, their comforts and parents, but carry with them a certain esteem for themselves; but this is the most hurtful attachment of all. The greatest sacrifice that we can make to God is to give to him not only goods, pleasures, and home, but ourselves also by leaving ourselves. This is that denying of self which Jesus Christ recommends above all to his followers. And for this self-denial it is necessary that every one should first place under foot all self-esteem, by desiring and embracing every imaginable contempt which he may meet with in religion,—as, for instance, to see others whom perhaps he thinks less deserving preferred to himself, or to be considered unfit to be employed, or only employed in lower and more laborious occupations. He should know that in the house of God those charges are the highest and the most honorable which are imposed by obedience. God forbid that any one should seek for or aspire to any office or charge of pre-eminence! This would be a strange thing in religion, and he would be noted as proud and ambitious, and as such be put in penance, and especially mortified in this point. Better would it be, perhaps, that a religious Order should be destroyed than that there should enter into it that accursed pest of ambition which, when it enters, disfigures the most exemplary Communities and the most beautiful works of God.

But he should feel even consoled in spirit when he sees himself mocked and despised by his companions. I say consoled in spirit, for as to the flesh this will be impossible ; nor need a subject be uneasy when he sees that he resents it : it is enough that the spirit embraces it, and that he rejoices at it in the superior part of the soul.

Thus also seeing himself continually reprimanded and mortified by all, not only by Superiors, but also by equals and inferiors, he should heartily and with a tranquil mind thank those who thus reprimand him and have the charity to admonish him, answering that he will be more attentive not to fall into that fault again. One of the greatest desires of the saints in this world was to be contemned for the love of Jesus Christ. This it is that St. John of the Cross asked for, when Jesus Christ appeared to him with a cross on his shoulder and said, "John, ask from me what thou wishest," and St. John answered, "O Lord, to suffer and to be despised for Thee." The Doctors teach, with St. Francis de Sales, that the highest degree of humility we can have is to be pleased with abjections and humiliations. And in this consists also one of the greatest merits that we can have with God. Some contempt or affront suffered in peace for the love of God is of greater value in his sight than a thousand disciplines and a thousand fasts.

It is necessary to know that to suffer contempt either from Superiors or from companions is a thing unavoidable even in the most holy Communities. Read the lives of the saints, and you will see how many mortifications were encountered by St. Francis Regis, St. Francis of Jerome, Father Torres, and others. The Lord sometimes permits that even between saints there should exist, though without their fault, certain natural antipathies, or at least a certain diversity of character between subjects of the greatest piety, which will cause them to suffer many contradictions. At other times false reports will be spread and believed; God himself will permit this, in order that the subjects may have occasion to exercise themselves in patience and humility.

42 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

In a word, he will gain little in religion and lose much who cannot quietly put up with contempt and contradiction; and, therefore, he who enters religion to give himself entirely to God should be ashamed not to know how to bear contempt when he appears before Jesus Christ, who was "filled with opprobriums" for love of us. Let every one be attentive to this, and resolve to be pleased in religion with all abjections, and to prepare himself to suffer many of them, for without the least doubt he will have many to bear. Otherwise, the disquiet caused by contradictions and contempt badly endured might trouble him so much as to make him lose his vocation, and drive him out of religion. Oh, how many have lost their vocation on account of such impatience in humiliations! But of what service to the Order or to God can he be who does not know how to bear contempt for his sake! And how can any one ever be said to be dead according to that promise which he made to Jesus Christ, on entering religion, to die to himself, if he remain alive to resentment and disquiet when he sees himself humbled? Out of the Order with such subjects, so attached to their own esteem—out with them ! It is well for them to go as soon as possible, that they may not also infect the rest with their pride. In religion every one should be dead, and especially to his own self-esteem ; otherwise it is better for them not to enter, or to depart again if they have already entered.

4. Detachment from one's own will.

He who enters into religion must altogether renounce his own will, consecrating it entirely to holy obedience. Of all things, this is the most necessary. What does it avail to leave comforts, parents, and honors, if still one carries into religion one's own will ? In this principally consists the denial of ourselves, the spiritual death, and the entire surrender of ourselves to Jesus Christ. The gift of the heart, that is, of the will, is what pleases him most, and what he wishes from the children of religion. Otherwise, if we do not entirely detach ourselves from our own will and renounce it in all, all mortifications, all meditations and prayers, and all other sacrifices will be of little avail.

It is, then, evident that this is the greatest merit that we can have before God, and this is the sure and only way of pleasing God in all things, so that then we can each one of us say what Jesus our Saviour said: "I do always the things that please him" (John viii. 29). Certainly he who in religion lives without self-will may say and hope that in all that he does he pleases God, whether he studies or prays or hears confession, whether he goes to the refectory or to recreation or to rest; for in religion not a step is made, not a breath drawn, but in obedience to the Rule, or to Superiors.

44 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

The world does not know, and even certain persons given to spirituality have little idea of, the great value of a Community life under obedience. It is true that outside of religious Communities there are to be found many persons who do much, and, may be, more than those that live under obedience; they preach, do penance, pray, and fast: but in all this they consult more or less their own will. God grant that at the day of judgment they may not have to lament as those mentioned in Scripture: "Why have we fasted, and Thou hast not regarded: why have we humbled our souls, and Thou hast not taken notice? Behold, every day of your fast your own will is found!" (Isa. lviii. 3.) On which passage St. Bernard remarks: "Self-will is a great evil, for it is the cause that what is good in itself may be for you no good at all" (In Cant. s. 71). This is to be understood, when in all these exercises one seeks not God, but one's self. On the contrary, he who does all by obedience is sure that in all he pleases God. The Venerable Mother Mary of Jesus said that she prized so much her vocation to religion principally for two reasons: the first was that in the monastery she enjoyed always the presence and company of Jesus in the Blessed Sacrament; and the other was that there by obedience she entirely belonged to God, sacrificing to him her own will.

It is related by Father Rodriguez that after the death of Dositheus, the disciple of St. Dorotheus, the Lord revealed that in those five years he had lived under obedience, though by reason of his infirmities he could not practise the austerities of the other monks, yet by the virtue of obedience he had merited the reward of St. Paul the Hermit, and of St. Antony, Abbot.

He, then, who wishes to enter religion must resolve to renounce altogether his own will, and to will only what holy obedience wills. God preserve any religious from ever letting fall from his mouth the words I will or I will not! But in all things, even when asked by Superiors, what he desires, he should only answer, I wish that which holy obedience wills. And, provided there is no evident sin, he should in every command imposed on him obey blindly and without examination; because the duty of examining and deciding the doubts belongs not to him, but to his Superiors. Otherwise, if in obeying he does not submit his own judgment to that of the Superior, his obedience will be imperfect. St. Ignatius of Loyola said that prudence in things of obedience is not required in subjects, but in Superiors; and if there is prudence in obeying, it is to obey without prudence. St. Bernard says, "Perfect obedience is indiscreet" (De Vit. sol.); and in another place he said, "For a prudent novice to remain in the congregation is an impossible thing;" and adding the reason for it, he said: "To judge belongs to the Superior, and to obey to the subject" (Ibid.).

But to make progress in this virtue of obedience, on which all depends, he must always keep his mind ready to do all that to which he feels the greatest repugnance, and on the contrary he must be prepared to bear it quietly when he sees that all that he seeks or desires is refused to him. It will happen that when he wishes to be in solitude, to apply himself to prayer or study, he will be the most employed in exterior occupations. For, though it is true that in religion one leads as much as possible a solitary life when at home, and that for this end there are many hours of silence, the retreat each year of ten days in perfect silence, and of one day each month, besides the fifteen days before the receiving of the habit, and one of fifteen before the profession, when the vows are made,—nevertheless, if it is an Order of priests called to work and to be employed for the salvation of souls, the subject, if he is continually employed in this by obedience, should be content with the prayers and exercises of the Community. He must be prepared sometimes to go even without these, when obedience will have him do so, without either excusing himself or being disquieted, being well persuaded of that of which St. Mary Magdalene of Pazzi was so confident when she said that: "All the things which are done through obedience are but so many prayers."

V. Trials which we must Expect to have in Religious Life.

WHEN, then, any one has thus entered religion, however truly he may be called, and though he may have conquered all his passions and his earthly affections, let him not imagine that he will be exempt from other temptations and trials, which God himself will send him, such as tediousness, darkness, various fears, in order to establish him more firmly in his vocation. We must remember that even the saints, who have loved their vocation the most, have sometimes suffered great darkness with regard to it, and that it seemed to them as if they were deceived and would not be able to save themselves in that state. So it happened with St. Teresa, St. John of the Cross, St. Frances de Chantal. But by recommending themselves to God, that darkness was dissipated, and they recovered their peace of mind. Thus the Lord tries his most beloved children, as it was said to Tobias: "Because thou wast acceptable to God, it was necessary that temptation should prove thee" (Tob. xii. 13). And in the book of Deuteronomy: "The Lord your God trieth you, that it may appear whether you love him or no" (Deut. xiii. 3). Let each one therefore prepare himself to suffer in religion this obscurity. It will sometimes appear to him that he cannot bear the observances of the Order; that he will have no more peace of mind, or will not even be able to save himself. But most of all, every one must be on his guard when the temptation presents specious scruples or pretexts of greater spiritual good, in order to make him abandon his vocation.

The principal remedies in such temptations are two in number.

First remedy: To have recourse to God.

The first is to have recourse to prayer: "Go ye to him and be enlightened" (Ps. xxxiii. 6). For as it will not be possible for temptation to overcome him who has recourse to prayer, so he who does not recommend himself to God will surely be overcome by it. And let it be remarked, that sometimes it will not suffice to have recourse to God once, or for a few days, to become victorious. Perhaps the Lord will permit the temptation to continue, even after we have prayed for several weeks, months, and even years ; but let us be assured that he who ceases not to recommend himself to God will certainly be enlightened and victorious, and thereafter he will have more peace and be more firm in his vocation.

50 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

Until we have gone through that storm, which for the most part comes over all, let none of us think himself secure. Let it be remarked, however, that in this time of temptation we should not expect to have fervor, and a clearness of reason sufficient to tranquillize ourselves ; for in the midst of this darkness we see nothing but confusion. We have nothing then to do but to say to the Lord : O Lord, help me ! O Lord, help me ! and also to have frequently recourse to the Blessed Virgin Mary, who is the Mother of perseverance, confiding in that divine promise : " Ask, and you shall receive " (John xvi. 24). And it is certain that he who with the help of divine grace is victorious in such a combat finds afterwards a double calm and peace in his vocation.

Second remedy : To have recourse to the Superiors.

The second remedy, and a principal and necessary one in such temptations, is to communicate to the Superiors, or to the spiritual Father of the Community, the temptation that afflicts you, and this at once, before the temptation becomes strong. St. Philip Neri said that when a temptation is thus manifested it is half vanquished. On the contrary, there is in such a case no greater evil than to conceal the temptation from Superiors; for then, on the one hand, God withdraws his light because of the little fidelity shown by the subject in not disclosing it, and on the other, whilst the mine is not sprung, the temptation gains strength. Hence it may be held for certain, that he will surely lose his vocation who, when he is tempted against it, does not disclose his temptations.

Let it be understood that in religion the most dangerous temptations that hell can bring against a subject are those against vocation, in which, if it should succeed and conquer, by that one stroke it will have gained many victories; for when a subject has lost his vocation and left religion, what good will he further be able to do in the service of God? Though the enemy may make him believe that out of religion he will have more peace and be able to do more good, nevertheless let him hold for certain, that as soon as he is out of it he will feel such a remorse in his heart that he will never more have peace. And God grant that such a remorse may not torment him afterwards through all eternity in hell, in which, as has already been said, he who through his own fault loses his vocation falls so very easily. He will be so lukewarm and discouraged in doing good, that he will not even have the courage to raise his eyes to heaven. It will be an easy thing for him to give up prayer altogether, because as often as he begins it he will feel a hell of remorse, hearing his conscience reproach him, and saying: What hast thou done? thou hast abandoned God; thou hast lost thy vocation, and for what?—to follow thine own caprice, to please thy parents. Let him be certain that he will have to hear this reproach through his whole life, and still more shall he hear it made to him in the hour of his death, when, in sight of eternity, instead of dying in the house of God and in the midst of good brethren in religion, he will have to die outside of the Community, perhaps in his own house, in the midst of his relatives, to please whom he has displeased God. Let religious always beseech God to let them die rather than to permit that greatest of disgraces, the greatness of which they will better understand at the hour of death and to their greater torment, because then there will be no more any remedy for their error. For him, then, who is tempted against his vocation this is the best meditation that he can make at the time of the temptation, that is, namely, to reflect what torment the remorse of having lost his vocation, and of having to die out of religion, through his own caprice, through his own fault, will cause him at the hour of death.

Conclusion.

Finally, let him who wishes to enter religion not forget to resolve to become a saint, and to suffer every exterior and interior pain, in order to be faithful to God, and not to lose his vocation. And if he be not resolved to do this, I exhort him not to deceive the Superiors and himself, and not to enter at all, for this is a sign that he is not called, or, which is a still greater evil, that he wishes not to correspond, as he should, with the grace of his vocation. Hence, with so bad a disposition it is better to remain without, in order to acquire a better disposition, and to resolve to give himself entirely to God, and to suffer all for God. Otherwise he will do an injury, both to himself and to the Order; for he will easily go back to the world, and then, being disgraced before the world, as well as before God, he will be guilty of a still further infidelity to his vocation, and will lose the confidence in the power of taking another step in the way of God. God only knows into what other misfortunes and sins he may afterwards fall.

54 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

On the other hand, a beautiful sight it is to see in religion souls wholly given to God, who live in the world as if out of the world, without any other thought than that of pleasing God.

In religion each one has to live only for eternal life. What happiness for us, if we spend these few days of our life for God! And to this he is most especially obliged who has perhaps already spent much of his life in the service of the world. Let us set eternity before our eyes, and then we shall suffer all with peace and joyfulness.

Let us thank God, who gives us so much light and so many means to serve him perfectly, since he has chosen us, from among so many, to serve him in religion, having bestowed on us the gift of his holy love. Let us make haste to please him in the practice of virtue, reflecting, as St. Teresa said to her daughters, that we have already by his grace done the principal thing necessary to become saints, by turning our backs on the world and all its goods; the least yet remains to be done, in order that we may be saints. I hold it for certain, that for those who die in religion, Jesus Christ has prepared a prominent place in paradise. On this earth we shall be poor, despised, and treated as fools, as imprudent men, but in the other life our lot will be changed.

Let us always recommend ourselves to our Redeemer hidden in the Sacrament, and to Most Holy Mary, because in religion all subjects must profess a most special love for Jesus in the Blessed Sacrament, and for the Immaculate Virgin Mary, and let us have great confidence. Jesus Christ has chosen us to be princes of his court, as we may confidently conclude from the protection that he extends to all religious Orders, and to each member of them. "The Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?" (Ps. xxvi. 1.)

56 Counsels Concerning Religious Vocation.

O Lord! finish Thy work, and for Thy glory grant us to be all Thine, so that all the members of Thy Orders may until the day of judgment be pleasing to Thee, and gain over to Thee an immense number of souls. Amen. Amen.

Considerations for those who are called to the Religious State.

Consideration I.

How the Salvation of the Soul is secured by entering the Religious State.

DO know how important is the eternal salvation of our soul, it suffices to have faith, and to consider that we have but one soul, and when that is lost, all is lost. "What doth it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and suffer the loss of his own soul?" (Matt. xvi. 26.) This great maxim of the Gospel has induced many youths either to shut themselves up in cloisters, or to live in deserts, or by martyrdom to give up their lives for Jesus Christ. For, said they, what does it profit us to possess the whole world, and all the goods of this world, in this present life, which must soon finish, and then be damned and be miserable in that life to come, which will never end? All those rich men, all those princes and emperors, who are now in hell,—what have they now of all that they enjoyed in this life, but a greater torment and a greater despair? Miserable beings, they lament now and say: “All those things are passed away like a shadow” (Wisd. v. 9). For them all is passed like a shadow, like a dream, and that lamentation which is their lot has lasted already many years, and shall last throughout eternity. “The fashion of this world passeth away” (1 Cor. vii. 31). This world is a scene that lasts but a short time; happy he that plays on this scene the part that will afterwards make him happy in the life that shall never end! When he shall then be contented, honored, and a prince in paradise, so long as God shall be God, little will he care for having been in this world poor, despised, and in tribulation. For this end only has God placed us on this earth, and keeps us here in life, not to acquire transitory but eternal goods: “The end is life everlasting” (Rom. vi. 22).

This is the sole end which all men that live in the world should have in view. But the misfortune is, that in the world one thinks little or nothing of everlasting life.

In the midst of the darkness of this Egypt the greatest number of men bestow all their care on acquiring honor and pleasures; and this is the reason why so many perish. "With desolation is all the land made desolate, because there is none that considereth in the heart" (Jer. xii. 11). How few are they who reflect on death, by which for us the scene is closed, on the eternity which awaits us, on what God has done for our sake! And thence it comes that these miserable beings live in blindness and at random, far from God, having their eyes, like the beasts, intent only on earthly things, without remembering God, without desiring his love, and without a thought of eternity. Therefore they die afterwards an unhappy death, which will be the beginning of an eternal death and an endless misery. Having at last arrived there, they will finally open their eyes, but it will be only to lament for their own foolishness.

This is the great means of salvation which is found in religion, to wit, the continual meditation on the eternal truths. "Remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin" (Ecclus. vii. 40). In all well-regulated religious houses this is done every day, and even several times a day. And therefore in this light of divine things, which there shines continually, it is morally impossible to live, at least for a long time, far from God, and without keeping one's account ready for eternity.

Prayer.

O my God ! how have I ever deserved this great mercy, that, having left so many others to live in the midst of the world, Thou hast willed to call me, who have offended Thee more than others, and deserved, more than they, to be deprived of Thy divine light, to enjoy the honor of living as a friend in Thy own house ! O Lord ! grant that I may understand this exceeding grace which Thou hast bestowed on me, that I may always thank Thee for it, as I purpose and hope to do always during my life and throughout eternity, and do not permit me to be ungrateful for it. Since Thou hast been so liberal towards me, and hast in Thy love preferred me to others, it is but just that more than others I should serve and love Thee. O my Jesus ! Thou wouldst have me to be wholly Thine, and to Thee I give myself wholly. Accept me, and henceforward keep me as Thy own, since I am no more mine. Finish Thou the work which Thou hast begun. Thou hast called me to Thy house, because Thou wilt have me become a saint. Make me, then, what Thou wilt have me. Do this, O eternal Father! for the love of Jesus Christ, in whom is all my confidence. I love Thee, my sovereign good, I love Thee. O infinite goodness, I love Thee only, and will love Thee forever.

O Mary, my hope, come to my assistance, and obtain for me to be always faithful and thankful to my Lord.

Consideration II.

The Happiness of the Religious at Death.

BLESSED are the dead who die in the Lord" (Apoc. xiv. 13). And who are those blessed dead who die in the Lord, but the religious, who at the end of their lives are found already dead to the world, having already detached themselves by their holy vows from the world and all its goods?

Consider, my brother, how content you will feel if, following your vocation, it will be your good fortune to die in the house of God. The devil will certainly represent to you that if you retire into the house of God you may perhaps afterwards repent of having left your own house and your own country, and deprived your parents of the help that they might have expected from you. But say to yourself: Shall I at the point of death repent of having put my resolution into execution, or shall I be content? I beseech you therefore to imagine yourself now already at the point of death, about to appear before the tribunal of Jesus Christ. Reflect what then, reduced to that state, you would wish to have done. Perhaps to have contented your parents, to have worked for your own family and your country, and then to die surrounded by brothers and nephews and relatives, after having lived in your own house, with the title of a pastor, of a canon, of a bishop, of a member of the cabinet, and after having done your own will? or rather, to die in the house of God, assisted by your good brethren in religion, who encourage you on the great passage to eternity, after having lived many years in religion, humbled, mortified, poor, far from parents, deprived of your own will, and under obedience, and detached from everything of the world,—all these things render death sweet and agreeable? “He who has been accustomed to deprive himself of the delights of the world will not regret doing so when he has to leave it," says St. Bernard. Pope Honorius II., when dying, wished that he had remained in his monastery, occupied in washing the plates, and had not been Pope. Philip II. wished at his death that he had been a lay-brother in some religious Order, intent on serving God, and had not been a king. Philip III., also king of Spain, said when he was dying: "Oh, that I had been in a desert, there to serve God, and that I had never been a monarch, for had such been the case, I should now appear with more confidence before the tribunal of Jesus Christ."

When, then, hell tempts you about your vocation, think of the hour of death, and set before your eyes that all-important moment "upon which eternity depends." Thus you will overcome all temptations, you will be faithful to God, and certainly you will not repent of it at the point of death, but will give thanks to the Lord, and die contented. Gerard, brother of St. Bernard, died singing, at the very thought of dying in the house of God.

Father Suarez, of the Society of Jesus, felt at his death so great consolation and sweetness at dying in religion, that he said: "I never thought it was so sweet to die."

Another good religious, of the same Society, when at the point of death, laughed; and being asked why he laughed, answered: "And why should I not laugh? Has not Jesus Christ himself promised paradise to him who leaves everything for his sake? Was it not he who said: 'Every one that hath left house, or brethren, or father, etc. shall receive a hundred-fold, and shall possess life everlasting'? (Matt. xix. 29.) I have left all for God; God is faithful; he cannot fail to fulfil his promises; and so he said: Why should I not rejoice and laugh, seeing myself assured of paradise?"

A certain lay-brother who died some years ago was asked at his death in which house he would rather be. He answered: "I desire nothing but to die and to be united with God."

Father Januarius Sarnelli, a short time before his death, when conversing with God, uttered the following words: "O Lord, Thou knowest that all I have done, all I have thought, has been for Thy glory; now I wish to go to see Thee face to face, if it please Thee so;" then he said: "Come, I will begin a sweet agony," and began to converse affectionately with God; and shortly after placidly expired, preserving the smile on his lips, and the body began to give forth a sweet odor, which, as they attested, was perceived for several days in the room in which he had died.

St. Bernard, speaking of the happy state of religious, had then good reason to exclaim: "O secure life, in which death is expected without fear, aye, sweetly desired and devoutly accepted!" (Ad Mil. T. c. 1.)

Prayer.

O my Lord Jesus Christ, who, in order to obtain a happy death for me, hast chosen so bitter a death for Thyself; since Thou hast loved me to such an extent as to have chosen me to follow more closely Thy holy life, to have me thus more intimately united with Thy loving heart, bind me, I beseech Thee, wholly to Thee with the sweet cords of Thy love, that I may no more separate myself from Thee. O my beloved Redeemer, I wish to be grateful to Thee, and to correspond with Thy grace, but I fear my weakness may render me unfaithful; O my Jesus, do not permit this. Let me die rather than abandon Thee, or forget the peculiar affection that Thou hast shown me. I love Thee, O my dear Saviour! Thou art and shalt always be the only Lord of my heart and of my soul. I leave all and choose Thee alone for my treasure, O most pure Lamb of God! O my most ardent lover. "My beloved is white and ruddy, chosen out of thousands" (Cant. v. 10). Begone, ye creatures! my only good is my God: he is my love, my all. I love Thee, O my Jesus, and in loving Thee I will spend the remainder of my life, be it short or be it long. I embrace Thee, I press Thee to my heart, and I wish to die united with Thee. I wish nothing else. Make me to live always burning with Thy love, and when I shall have arrived at the end of my life, make me to expire in an ardent act of love towards Thee.

66 Considerations on the Religious State.

Immaculate Virgin Mary, obtain thou this grace for me; I hope it from thee.

Consideration III.

The account that he will have to render to Jesus Christ, on the day of judgment, who does not follow his vocation.

THE grace of vocation to the religious state is not an ordinary grace: it is a very rare one, which God grants only to a few. "He hath not done in like manner to every nation" (Psa. cxlvii). Oh, how much greater is this grace of vocation to a perfect life and to become one of the household of God, than if one were called to be the king of any kingdom on this earth ! for what comparison can there be between a temporal kingdom of this earth and the eternal kingdom of heaven ?

But the greater the grace is, the greater will be the indignation of the Lord against him who has not corresponded with it, and the more rigorous will be his judgment at the day of account. If a king were to call a poor shepherd to his royal palace, to serve him among the noblemen of his court, what would not be the indignation of this king were he to refuse such a favor through unwillingness to leave his miserable stable and his little flock ? God knows well the value of his graces, and therefore he chastises with severity those who despise them. He is the Lord ; when he calls he wishes to be obeyed, and obeyed promptly. When, therefore, by his inspiration he calls a soul to a perfect life, if it does not correspond he deprives it of his light, and abandons it to its own darkness. Oh, how many poor souls shall we see among the reprobate on the day of judgment for this very reason, that they were called and would not correspond !

Give thanks, then, to the Lord, who has invited you to follow him; but fear if you do not correspond. Since God calls you to serve him nearer to his person, it is a sign that he wishes to save you. But he will have you to be saved in that path only which he indicates to you and has chosen for you. If you wish to save yourself on a road of your own choosing, there is great danger that you will not be saved at all; for if you remain in the world, when God wishes you to be a religious, he will not give you those efficacious helps prepared for you had you lived in his house, and without these you will not save yourself. "My sheep hear my voice" (John x. 27). He who will not obey the voice of God shows that he is not and will not be one of his sheep, but in the valley of Josaphat will be condemned with the goats.

Prayer.

O Lord, Thou hast shown me such an excess of bounty as to choose me from among so many others, to serve Thee in Thy own house with Thy most beloved servants. I know how great is that grace and how unworthy of it I have been. Behold, I am willing to correspond to a love so great. I will obey Thee. Since Thou hast been towards me so liberal as to call me when I did not seek Thee, and when I was so ungrateful, permit not that I should offer to Thee that greater excess of ingratitude—to embrace again my enemy, the world, in which heretofore I have often forfeited Thy grace and my eternal salvation, and thus to forsake Thee, who hast shed Thy blood and given Thy life for my sake. Since Thou hast called me, give me also the strength to correspond to the call. Already have I promised to obey Thee. I promise this again, but without the grace of perseverance I cannot be faithful to Thee. This perseverance I ask of Thee, and through Thy own merits it is that I wish it and hope to obtain it. Give me the courage to vanquish the passions of the flesh, through which the devil seeks to bring me to betray Thee. I love Thee, O my Jesus; to Thee I consecrate myself entirely. I am already Thine, I will be always Thine.

O Mary, my mother and my hope, thou art the mother of perseverance: this grace is only dispensed through thy hands; do thou obtain it for me: in thee do I confide.

Consideration IV.

The Torment which in Hell shall be the Lot of Him who is Damned for having Lost His Vocation.

THE pain of having through one's own fault lost some great good, or of having brought upon one's self voluntarily some great evil, is a pain so great that even in this life it causes an insupportable torment. But what torment will that youth, called by the singular favor of God to the religious state, feel in hell, when he then perceives that, if he had obeyed God, he would have attained a high place in paradise, and sees himself nevertheless confined in that prison of torments, without hope of remedy for this his eternal ruin? "Their worm dieth not" (Mark ix. 43).

This will be that worm which, living always, shall always gnaw his heart by a continual remorse. He will say then: What a fool I was! I might have become a great saint. And if I had obeyed, I would certainly have become so; and now I am damned without remedy.

Miserable being! Then, for his greater torment, on the day of judgment he will see and recognize at the right hand, and crowned as saints, those who have followed their vocation, and, leaving the world, have retired to the house of God, to which he also had been once called. And then shall he see himself separated from the company of the blessed, and placed in the midst of that innumerable and miserable crew of the damned for his disobedience to the voice of God.

We know well, as we have considered above, that to this most unhappy lot he exposes himself who, in order to follow his own caprice, turns a deaf ear to the call of God. Therefore, my brother, you who have already been called to become a saint in the house of God, consider that you will expose yourself to a great danger should you lose your vocation through your own fault. And this very vocation which God in his sovereign bounty has given you, in order, as it were, to take you out from among the mass and place you among the chosen princes of his paradise, will, through your own fault, should you be unfaithful to it, become an especial hell for you. Make your choice, then; for God leaves it in your own hands either to be a great king in paradise or a reprobate in hell, more despairing than the rest.

Prayer.

No, my God, permit me not to disobey Thee and to be unfaithful. I see Thy goodness, and thank Thee because, instead of casting me away from Thy face and banishing me into hell, as I have so often deserved, Thou callest me to become a saint, and preparest for me a high place in paradise. I see that I should deserve a double torment should I not correspond with this grace which is not given to all. I will obey Thee. Behold, I am Thine, and always will be Thine. I embrace with joy all the pains and discomforts of the religious life to which Thou invitest me. And what are these pains in comparison with the eternal pains that I have deserved? I was entirely lost through my sins; now I give myself entirely to Thee. Dispose of me and my life as Thou pleasest. Accept, O Lord, of one already condemned to hell, as I have been, to serve Thee and love Thee in this life and in the next. I will love Thee as much as I have deserved to be doomed to hate Thee in hell, O God, worthy of an infinite love! O my Jesus, Thou hast broken those chains by which the world held me bound; Thou hast delivered me from the servitude of my enemies. I will love Thee much, then, O my Love; and for the love I bear Thee, I will always love Thee and obey Thee.

Always will I thank thee, O Mary, my advocate, who hast obtained this mercy for me. Help me, and suffer me not to be ungrateful to that God who has loved me so much. Obtain for me that I may die rather than be unfaithful to so great a grace. Thus I hope.

Consideration V.

The Immense Glory that Religious enjoy in Heaven.

ONSIDER, in the first place, that which St. Bernard says—that it is difficult for religious, who die in the religious state, to be damned. “From the cell to heaven the way is easy; one scarcely ever descends from his cell into hell.” And the reason which the saint adduces is, “because one scarcely ever perseveres in it until death, unless he be predestinated” (De Vita sol. c. 4). For a religious with difficulty perseveres until his death, if he is not of the number of the elect of paradise. Therefore, St. Laurence Justinian called the religious state the gate of paradise. "Of that heavenly city this is the gate." And he said that "therefore the religious have a great sign of their predestination" (De Disc. mon. c. 7).

Consider, moreover, that the reward of heaven, as the Apostle says, is "a crown of justice" (2 Tim. iv. 8); wherefore God, though he rewards us for our works more abundantly than we deserve, rewards us, nevertheless, in proportion to the works we have done. "He will render to every man according to his works" (Matt. xvi. 27). From this consider how exceedingly great will be the reward which God will give in heaven to good religious, in consideration of the great merits which they daily acquire.

The religious gives to God all his goods of this earth, and is content to be entirely poor, without possessing anything. The religious renounces all attachment to his parents, friends, and country, in order to unite himself more closely with God. The religious continually mortifies himself in many things which he would enjoy in the world. The religious, finally, gives to God his whole self by giving him his will through the vow of obedience.

But the dearest thing that we have is our own will; and what God, of all other things, requires of us most, is our heart, that is, our will. "My son, give me thy heart" (Prov. xxiii. 26). He who serves God in the world will give him his possessions, but not himself; he will give him a part, and not the whole; for he will give him indeed his goods by alms-deeds, his food by fasting, his blood by disciplines, etc.: but he will always reserve for himself his own will, fasting when he pleases, praying when he likes. But the religious, giving him his own will, gives himself and gives all; gives not only the fruits of the tree, but the whole tree itself. Hence, he may then truly say to him: O Lord! having given Thee my will, I have nothing more to give Thee.

Therefore, in all that he does through obedience he is sure to do the will of God perfectly, and merits in all things, not only when he prays, when he hears confessions, when he preaches, or fasts, or practises other mortifications, but also when he takes his food, when he sweeps his room, when he makes his bed, when he takes his rest, when he recreates himself; for doing all this through obedience, he does in all the will of God. St. Mary Magdalene of Pazzi said that all that is done through obedience is a prayer. Hence St. Anseim, speaking of those who love obedience, asserted that all that religious do is meritorious for them. St. Aloysius Gonzaga said that in religion one sails as it were in a vessel, in which he even advances who does not row.

Oh, how much more will a religious gain in one month by observing his Rule, than a secular, with all his penance and prayers, in a year! Of that disciple of Dorotheus, called Dositheus, it was revealed that for the five years he had lived under obedience there was given to him in heaven the glory of St. Paul, Hermit, and of St. Antony, Abbot, both of whom had for so many years lived in the desert. Religious, it is true, have to suffer the inconveniences of regular observance: "Going, they went and wept." But when they shall be called to the other life, they will go to heaven, but "coming, they shall come with joyfulness, carrying their sheaves" (Ps. cxxv. 6). Hence they shall then sing: "The lines are fallen unto me in goodly places, for my inheritance is goodly to me" (Ps. xv. 6). These bonds which have bound me to the Lord have become for me exceedingly precious, and the glory they have acquired for me is exceedingly great.

Prayer.

Is it possible, O my God and my true lover, that Thou desirest so much my good, and to be loved by me, and that I, miserable that I am, desire so little to love and to please Thee? For what end hast Thou favored me with so many graces, and taken me out of the world? O my Jesus, I understand Thee: Thou lovest me much, Thou wilt have me love Thee much also, and be all Thine, in this life and in the next. Thou wishest that my love should not be divided with creatures, but wilt have it be wholly for Thyself, the only good, the only lovely one, and worthy of infinite love. Ah! my Lord, my treasure, my love, my all, yet I pant and truly desire to love Thee, and to love no other but Thee. I thank Thee for this desire which Thou hast given me; preserve it in me, always increase it in me, and grant that I may please Thee, and love Thee on this earth, as Thou desirest, so that I may come hereafter to love Thee face to face, with all my strength, in paradise. Behold, this is all I ask from Thee; Thee will I love, O my God! I will love Thee, and for Thy love I offer myself to suffer every pain. I will become a saint, not that I may enjoy great delight in heaven, but to please Thee much, O my beloved Lord, and to love Thee much forever. Graciously hear me, O eternal Father, for the love of Jesus Christ.

My Mother Mary, for the love of this thy Son, help thou me. Thou art my hope; from thee I hope every good.

Consideration VI.

The Peace God gives Good Religious to Enjoy.

THE promises of God cannot fail; God has said: "Every one that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, . . . or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundred-fold, and shall possess life everlasting" (Matt. xix. 29). That is, the hundred-fold on this earth, and life everlasting in heaven.

The peace of the soul is a good which is of greater value than all the kingdoms of the world. And what avails it to have the dominions of the whole world without interior peace? Better is it to be the poorest villager, and to be content, than to be the lord of the whole world, and to live a discontented life. But who can give this peace? The unquiet world? Oh, no; peace is a good that is obtained only from God. "O God!" prays the Church, "give to Thy servants that peace which the world cannot give." Therefore he is called the God of all consolation. But if God is the sole giver of peace, to whom shall we suppose will he give that peace but to those who leave all, and detach themselves from all creatures, in order to give themselves entirely to their Creator? And therefore is it seen, that good religious, shut up in their cells, though mortified, despised, and poor, live a more contented life than the great ones of the world, with all the riches, the pomps and diversions that they enjoy.

St. Scholastica said that if men knew the peace which good religious enjoy, the whole world would become a monastery; and St. Mary Magdalene of Pazzi said, that all, if they knew it, would scale the walls of the monasteries in order to enter them. The human heart having been created for an infinite good, all creatures cannot content it, they being finite, imperfect, and few; only God, who is an infinite good, can render it content. "Delight in the Lord, and he will give thee the requests of thy heart" (Ps.

xxxvi. 4). Oh, no; a good religious united with God envies none of the princes of the world who possess kingdoms, riches, and honors. "Let the rich," he will say with St. Paulinus, "have their riches, the kings have their kingdoms: to me, Christ is my kingdom and my glory" (Ep. ad Aprum). He will see those of the world foolishly glory in their displays and vanities; but he, seeking always to detach himself more from earthly things, always to unite himself more closely to his God, will live contented in this life, and will say: "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses, but we will call upon the name of the Lord, our God" (Ps. xix. 8).

St. Teresa said that one drop of heavenly consolation is of greater value than all the pleasures of the world. Father Charles of Lorraine, having become a religious, said that God by one moment of the happiness which he gave him to feel in religion, superabundantly paid him for all he had left for God. Hence his joyfulness was sometimes so great that, when alone in his cell, he could not help beginning to leap. The Blessed Seraphino of Ascoli, a Capuchin lay-brother, said that he would not exchange a foot length of his cord for all the kingdoms of the world.

Oh, what content does he find who, having left all for God, is able to say with St. Francis, "My God and my all!" and with that to see himself freed from the servitude of the world, from the thralldom of worldly fashion, and from all earthly affections. This is the liberty enjoyed by the children of God, which good religious are. It is true that in the beginning the deprivation of the conversations and pastimes of the world, the observances of the Community, and the rules, seem to be thorns; but these thorns, as our Lord said to St. Bridget, will all become flowers and delights to him who courageously bears their first stings, and he will taste on this earth that peace which, as St. Paul says, surpasses all the gratifications of the senses, and all the enjoyments of feasts, of banquets, and of the pleasures of the world: "The peace of God, which surpasseth all understanding" (Phil. iv. 7). And what greater peace can there be, than to know that one pleases God?

Prayer.

O my Lord and my God, my all; I know that Thou alone canst make me contented, in this life and in the next. But I will not love Thee for my own contentment; I will love Thee only to content Thy heart. I wish this to be my peace, my only satisfaction during my whole life, to unite my will to Thy holy will, even should I have to suffer every pain in order to do this. Thou art my God, I am Thy creature. And what can I hope for greater than to please Thee, my Lord, my God, who hast been so partial in Thy love towards me? Thou, my Jesus, hast left heaven to live for the love of me a poor and mortified life. I leave all to live only for the love of Thee, my most blessed Redeemer. I love Thee with my whole heart; if only Thou wilt give me the grace to love Thee, treat me as Thou pleasest.

O Mary, Mother of my God, protect me and render me like to thee, not in thy glory, which I do not deserve, as thou dost, but in pleasing God, and obeying his holy will, as thou didst.

Consideration VII.

The Damage done to Religious by Tepidity.

ONSIDER the misery of that religious who, after having left his home, his parents, and the world with all its pleasures, and after having given himself to Jesus Christ, consecrating to him his will and his liberty, exposes himself at last to the danger of being damned, by falling into a lukewarm and negligent life, and continuing therein. Oh, no, not far from perdition is a lukewarm religious who has been called into the house of God to become a saint. God threatens to reject such, and to abandon them, if they do not amend. "But because thou art lukewarm, I will begin to vomit thee out of my mouth" (Apoc. iii. 16).

St. Ignatius of Loyola, seeing a lay-brother of his Order become lukewarm in the service of God, called him one day and said to him: Tell me, my brother, why did you come to religion? He answered: To serve God. O my brother! replied the saint, what have you said? If you had answered that you came to serve a cardinal, or a prince of this earth, you would be more excusable; but you say that you came to serve God, and do you serve him thus?

Father Nieremberg says that some are called by God to be saved only as saints, so that, if they should not take care to live as saints, thinking to be saved as imperfect Christians, they will not be saved at all. And St. Augustine says that such are in most cases abandoned by God: "Negligent souls God is accustomed to abandon" (In Ps. cxviii. s. 10). And how does he abandon them? By permitting them from lighter faults, which they see, and do not mind, to fall into grievous ones, and lose divine grace and their vocation. St. Teresa of Jesus saw the place prepared for her in hell, had she not detached herself from an earthly, though not a grievously culpable affection. "He that contemneth small things, shall fall by little and little" (Ecclus. xix. 1).

Many wish to follow Jesus Christ, but from afar as St. Peter did, who, when his Master was arrested in the garden, says St. Matthew, "followed him afar off" (Matt. xxvi. 58). But by doing so, that will easily happen to them which happened to St. Peter, namely, that when the occasion came he denied Jesus Christ. A lukewarm religious will be contented with what little he does for God; but God, who called him to a perfect life, will not be contented, and in punishment for his ingratitude will not only deprive him of his special favors, but will sometimes permit his fall. "When you said, It is enough, then you perished" (Serm. 169, E. B.). The fig-tree of the Gospel was cast into the fire, only because it brought forth no fruit.

Father Louis de Ponte said: "I have committed many faults, but I have never made peace with them." Miserable is that religious who, being called to perfection, makes peace with his defects. As long as we detest our imperfections, there is hope that we may still become saints; but when we commit faults and make little of them, then says St. Bernard, the hope of becoming saints is lost. "He who soweth sparingly, shall also reap sparingly" (2 Cor. ix. 6) Common graces do not suffice to make one a saint, extraordinary ones are necessary; but how will God be liberal with his favors towards the one that acts sparingly and with reserve in his love towards him?

Moreover, to become a saint one must have courage and strength to overcome all repugnances; and let no one ever believe, says St. Bernard, that he will be able to attain to perfection if he does not render himself singular among others in the practice of virtue. "What is perfect cannot but be singular." Reflect, my brother, for what you left the world and all. To become a saint. But that lukewarm and imperfect life which you lead, is that the way of becoming a saint? St. Teresa animated her daughters by saying to them: My sisters, you have done the principal thing necessary to become saints ; the least remains yet to be done. The same I say to you ; you have, perhaps, done the chief part already ; you have left your country, your home, your parents, your goods, and your amusements ; the least remains yet to be done, to become a saint ; do it.

Prayer.

O my God, reject me not, as I deserve, for I will amend. I know well that so negligent a life as mine cannot satisfy Thee. I know that I have myself, by my lukewarmness, shut the door against the graces which Thou dost desire to bestow upon me. O Lord! do not yet abandon me ; continue to be merciful towards me ; I will rise from this miserable state. I will for the future be more careful to overcome my passions, to follow Thy inspirations, and never will I through slothfulness omit my duties, but I will fulfil them with greater diligence. In a word, I will from this time forward do all that I can to please Thee, and I will neglect nothing that I may know to be pleasing to Thee. Since Thou, O my Jesus ! hast been so liberal with Thy graces towards me, and hast deigned to give Thy blood and Thy life for me, there is no reason I should act with such reserve towards Thee. Thou art worthy of all honor, all love, and to please Thee one should gladly undergo every labor, every pain. But, O my Redeemer! Thou knowest my weakness; help me with Thy powerful grace; in Thee I confide.

O immaculate Virgin Mary! thou who hast helped me to leave the world, help me to overcome myself and to become a saint.

Consideration VIII.

How dear to God is a Soul that gives Itself entirely to Him.

GOD loves all those who love him: "I love them that love me" (Prov. viii. 17). Many, however, give themselves to God, but preserve still in their hearts some attachment to creatures, which prevents them from belonging entirely to God. How then shall God give himself entirely to him who, besides his God, loves creatures still? It is just that he should act with reserve towards those who act with reserve towards him. On the contrary, he gives himself entirely to those souls who, driving from their hearts everything that is not God, and does not lead them to his love, and giving themselves to him without reserve, truly say to him: "My God and my all." St. Teresa, as long as she entertained an inordinate affection, though not an impure one, could not hear from Jesus Christ what afterwards she heard, when, freeing herself from every attachment, she gave herself entirely to the divine love, namely, the Lord saying to her: "Now, because thou art all mine, I am all thine."

Consider that the Son of God has already given himself entirely to us: "A Child is born to us, and a Son is given to us" (Isa. ix. 6). He has given himself to us through the love he bears to us. "He hath loved us, and hath delivered himself for us" (Ephes. v. 2). It is then just, says St. John Chrysostom, that when a God has given himself to you without reserve, "He has given thee all—nothing has he left to himself," you also should give yourself to God without reserve, and that always henceforth, burning with divine love, you should sing to him:

Thine wholly always will I be :
 Thou hast bestowed Thyself on me ;
 Wholly I give myself to Thee.

St. Teresa revealed to one of her nuns, appearing to her after her death, that God loves one soul who, as a spouse, gives herself entirely to him, more than a thousand tepid and imperfect ones. From these generous souls, given entirely to God, is the choir of Seraphim completed. The Lord himself says, that he loves a soul, who attends to her perfection, so much, that he seems not to love any other. "One is my dove; my perfect one is but one" (Cant. vi. 8). Hence Blessed Giles exhorted us: "One for one;" by which he wished to say, that this one soul we have we should give wholly, not divided, to that one who alone deserves all love, on whom depends all our good, and who loves us more than all. "Leave all, and you shall find all," says Thomas à Kempis (B. III. c. 32). Leave all for God, and in God you shall find all. "O soul," concludes St. Bernard, "be alone, that you may keep yourself for him alone" (In Cant. s. 40). Keep yourself alone, give no part of your affections to creatures, that you may belong only to him who alone deserves an infinite love, and whom alone you should love.

Prayer.

"My Beloved to me, and I to him" (Cant. ii. 16). As then, O my God! Thou hast given Thyself entirely to me, I should be too ungrateful if I should not give myself entirely to Thee; since Thou wouldst have me belong wholly to Thee, behold, O my Lord! I give myself entirely to Thee. Accept me through Thy mercy; disdain me not. Grant that this my heart, which once loved creatures, may turn now wholly to Thy infinite goodness. "Let me henceforth die," said St. Teresa; "let another than myself live in me. Let God live in me, and give me life. Let him reign, and let me be his slave, for my soul wishes no other liberty." This my heart is too small, O God most worthy of love, and it is too little able to love Thee, who art deserving of an infinite love. I should then commit against Thee too great an injustice, should I still divide it by loving anything besides Thee. I love Thee, my God, above everything. I love only Thee, I renounce all creatures, and give myself entirely to Thee, my Jesus, my Saviour, my love, my all. I say, and always will say: "What have I in heaven, and besides thee, what do I desire on earth? . . . Thou art the God of my heart, and the God that is my portion forever" (Ps. lxxii. 25). I desire nothing, either in this life or in the next, but to possess the treasure of Thy love. God of my heart, I am unwilling that creatures should have any more a place in my heart; Thou alone must be its master. To Thee alone shall it belong for the future. Thou alone shalt be my God, my repose, my desire, all my love. I say with St. Ignatius: "Give me only Thy love and Thy grace, and I am rich enough."

O most holy Virgin Mary, obtain for me this, that I may be faithful to God, and never recall the donation that I have made of myself to him.

Consideration IX.

How Necessary it is, in order to become a Saint, to have a great Desire for it.

NO saint has ever attained to sanctity without a great desire. As wings are necessary to birds in order to fly, so holy desires are necessary to the soul in order to advance in the road to perfection. To become saints, we must detach ourselves from creatures, conquer our passions, overcome ourselves, and love crosses. But to do all this, much strength is required, and we must suffer much. But what is the effect of holy desire? St. Laurence Justinian answers us: "It supplies strength, and makes the pain easier to be borne" (De Dis. mon. c. 6). Hence the same saint adds, that he has already vanquished who has a great desire of vanquishing: "A great part of the victory is the desire of vanquishing" (De Casto Conn. c. 3). He who wishes to reach the top of a high mountain will never reach it if he has not a great desire to do so. This will give him courage and strength to undergo the fatigue of ascending, otherwise he will stop at the foot wearied and discouraged.

St. Bernard asserts that we acquire perfection in proportion to the desire for it which we preserve in our heart, and St. Teresa said that God loves generous souls that have great desires, for which reason the saint exhorted all in this way: "Let our thoughts be high, . . . for thence will come our good. We must not have low and little desires, but have that confidence in God, that, if we make the proper efforts, we shall by little and little attain to that perfection which, with His grace, the saints have reached." In this way the saints attained in a short time, to a great degree of perfection, and were able to do great things for God. "Being made perfect in a short time, he fulfilled a long time" (Wisd. iv. 13).

Thus St. Aloysius Gonzaga attained in a few years (he lived not over twenty-three years) to such a degree of sanctity, that St. Mary Magdalene of Pazzi, in an ecstasy, seeing him in heaven, said, it seemed to her in a certain way that there was no saint in heaven who enjoyed a greater glory than Aloysius; and she understood at the same time that he had arrived at so high a degree by the great desire he had cherished of being able to love God as much as he deserved, and that seeing this beyond his reach, the holy youth had suffered on earth a martyrdom of love.

St. Bernard, being in religion, in order to excite his fervor used to say to himself: "Bernard, for what did you come here?" I say the same to you: What have you come to do in the house of God? To become a saint? And what are you doing? Why do you lose the time? Tell me, do you desire to become a saint? If you do not, it is certain you will never become one. If, then, you have not this desire, ask Jesus Christ for it, ask Mary for it. And if you have it, take courage, says St. Bernard, for many do not become saints, because they do not take courage. And so I repeat it, let us take courage, and great courage.

What do we fear? What inspires this diffidence in us? That Lord who has given us strength to leave the world will give us also the grace to embrace the life of a saint. Everything comes to an end. Our life, be it a contented or a discontented one, will also come to an end, but eternity will never terminate. Only that little we have done for God will console us in death and throughout eternity. The fatigue will be short, eternal shall be the crown, which is already, so to speak, before our eyes. How satisfied are the saints now with all that they have suffered for God! If a sorrow could enter paradise, the blessed would be sorry for this alone, that they have neglected to do for God what they might have done more, but which now they are unable to do. Take courage then, and be prompt, for there is no time to lose; what can be done to-day, we may not be able to do to-morrow. St. Bernardine of Siena said that one moment of time is of as great a value as God himself, for at every moment we may gain God, his divine grace, and higher degrees of merits.

Prayer.

Behold, O my God, here I am. "My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready"

(Ps. lvi. 8). See, I am prepared to do all Thou shalt require of me. "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" (Acts ix. 6.) Tell me, O Lord, what Thou desirest of me. I will obey Thee in all. I am sorry for having lost so much time in which I might have pleased Thee, and yet have not done so. I thank Thee, that still Thou givest me time to do so. Oh, no, I will not lose any more time. I will and desire to become a saint, not to obtain from Thee a greater glory and more delights. I will become a saint, that I may love Thee more, and to please Thee in this life and in the next. Make me, O Lord! to love and please Thee as much as Thou desirest. Behold, this is all that I ask of Thee, O my God! I will love Thee, I will love Thee, and in order to love Thee I offer myself to undergo every fatigue and to suffer every pain. O my Lord! increase in me always this desire, and give me the grace to execute it. Of myself I can do nothing, but assisted by Thee I can do all. Eternal Father, for the love of Jesus Christ, graciously hear me. My Jesus, through the merits of Thy Passion, come to my succor. O Mary, my hope, for the love of Jesus Christ, protect me.

Consideration X.

The Love We Owe to Jesus Christ in Consideration of the Love that He has Shown to us.

IN order to understand the love that the Son of God has borne to us, it is enough to consider what St. Paul says of Jesus Christ: "He emptied himself, taking the form of a servant. . . . He humbled himself, becoming obedient even to the death of the cross" (Phil. ii. 7, 8). "He emptied himself." O God, what admiration has it caused, and will it cause throughout eternity, to the angels, to see a God who became man for the love of man, and submitted himself to all the weaknesses and sufferings of man! "And the Word was made flesh" (John i. 14). What a cause of astonishment would it not be to see a king become a worm for the sake of worms! But an infinitely greater wonder it is, to see a God made man, and after this to see him humbled unto the painful and infamous death of the cross on which he finished his most holy life. Moses and Elias, on Mount Thabor, speaking of his death, as it is related in the Gospel, called it an excess: "They spoke of his decease [the Latin word is excessus, which also means excess], that he should accomplish in Jerusalem" (Luke ix. 31). Yea, says St. Bonaventure, it is with reason the death of Jesus Christ was called an excess, for it was an excess of suffering and of love, such that it would be impossible to believe it if it had not already happened. An excess of love, adds St. Augustine; for to this end the Son of God would come on earth, to live a life so laborious and to die a death so bitter, namely, that he might make known to man how much he loved him. "Therefore Christ came, that man should know how much God loved him" (De catech. rud. c. 4).

The Lord revealed to his servant Armella Nicolas that the love that he bore to man was the cause of all his sufferings and his death. If Jesus Christ had not been God, but only a man, and our friend, what greater love could he have shown us, than to die for us? "Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John xv. 13). Ah, how at the thought of the love shown us by Jesus Christ the saints esteemed it little to give their life and their all for so loving a God! How many youths, how many noblemen, are there not, who have left their house, their country, their riches, their parents and all, to retire into cloisters, to live only for the love of Jesus Christ! How many young virgins, renouncing their nuptials with princes, and the great ones of the world, have gone with joyfulness to death, to render thus some compensation for the love of a God who had been executed on an infamous gibbet, and died for their sake!

This appeared to St. Mary Magdalene of Pazzi to be foolishness: hence she called her Jesus a fool of love. In exactly the same manner the Gentiles, as St. Paul attests, hearing the death of Jesus Christ preached to them, thought it foolishness not possible to be believed. "We preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews indeed a stumbling-block, and unto the Gentiles foolishness" (1 Cor. i. 23). How is it possible, they said, that a God most happy in himself, who is in want of nothing, should die for the sake of man, his servant? This would be as much as to believe that God became a fool for the love of men. Nevertheless it is of faith, that Jesus Christ, the true Son of God, did, for love of us, deliver himself up to death. "He hath loved us, and hath delivered himself for us" (Eph. v. 2). The same Mary Magdalene had reason then to exclaim, lamenting the ingratitude of men towards so loving a God: "O love not known! O love not loved!" Indeed, Jesus Christ is not loved by men, because they live in forgetfulness of his love.

And, in fact, a soul that considers a God, who died for its sake, cannot live without loving him. "The charity of Christ presseth us" (2 Cor. v. 14). The soul will feel itself inflamed, and as if constrained to love a God who has loved it so much. Jesus Christ could have saved us, says Father Nieremberg, with only one drop of his blood; but it was his will to shed all his blood, and to give his divine life, that at the sight of so many sufferings and of his death we might not content ourselves with an ordinary love, but be sweetly constrained to love with all our strength a God so full of love towards us. "That they also who live may not now live to themselves, but unto him who died for them" (Ib. v. 15.)

Prayer.

Indeed, O my Jesus, my Lord, and my Redeemer! only too much hast Thou obliged me to love Thee, too much my love has cost Thee. I should be too ungrateful if I should content myself to love with reserve a God who has given me his blood, his life, and his entire self. Oh, Thou hast died for me, Thy poor servant: it is but just that I should die for Thee, my God and my all. Yes, O my Jesus! I detach myself from all, to give myself to Thee. I put away from me the love of all creatures, in order to consecrate myself entirely to Thy love. "My beloved is chosen from among thousands" (Cant. v. 10). I choose Thee alone out of all things for my good, my treasure, and my only love. I love Thee O my love! I love Thee. Thou art not satisfied that I should love Thee a little only. Thou art not willing to have me love anything besides Thee. Thee I will please in all things, Thee will I love much, and Thou shalt be my only love. My God, my God, help me, that I may fully please Thee.

Mary, my queen, do thou also help me to love my God much. Amen. So I hope; so may it be.

Consideration XI.

*The great Happiness which Religious enjoy
in dwelling in the same House with Jesus Christ in the Blessed Sacrament.*

THE Venerable Mother Mary of Jesus, foundress of a convent in Toulouse, said that she esteemed very much her lot as a religious, for two principal reasons. The first was, that religious, through the vow of obedience, belong entirely to God; and the second, that they have the privilege of dwelling always with Jesus Christ in the Blessed Sacrament. And in truth, if people of the world deem it so great a favor to be invited by kings to dwell in their palaces, how much more favored should we esteem ourselves, who are admitted to dwell continually with the King of heaven in his own house?

In houses of religious Jesus Christ dwells for their sake in the church, so that they can find him at all hours. Persons of the world can scarcely go to visit him during the day, and in many places only in the morning. But the religious find him in the tabernacle as often as they wish—in the morning, in the afternoon, and during the night. There they may continually converse with their Lord, and there Jesus Christ rejoices to converse familiarly with his beloved servants, whom, for this end, he has called out of Egypt, that he may be their companion during this life, hidden under the veil of the Most Holy Sacrament, and in the next unveiled in paradise. "O solitude!" it may be said of every religious house, "in which God familiarly speaks and converses with his friends." The souls that love Jesus Christ much, do not know how to wish for any other paradise on this earth than to be in the presence of their Lord, who dwells in this sacrament for the love of those that seek and visit him.

"His conversation hath no bitterness, nor his company any tediousness" (Wisd. viii. 16). He finds tediousness in the company of Jesus Christ, who does not love him. But those who on this earth have given all their love to Jesus Christ, find in the sacrament all their pleasure, their rest, their paradise; and therefore they keep their hearts always mindful to visit, as often as they can, their God in the sacrament, to pay their court to him, giving vent to their affections at the foot of the altar, offering him their afflictions, their desires of loving him, of seeing him face to face, and in the mean time of pleasing him in all things.

Prayer.

Behold me in Thy presence, O my Jesus, hidden in the sacrament! Thou art the self-same Jesus who for me didst sacrifice Thyself on the cross. Thou art he who lovest me so much, and who hast therefore confined Thyself in this prison of love. Amongst so many, who have offended Thee less than I, and who have loved Thee better than I, Thou hast chosen me in Thy goodness to keep Thee company in this house, where, having drawn me from the midst of the world, Thou hast destined me always to live united with Thee, and afterwards to have me nigh Thee to praise and to love Thee in Thy eternal kingdom. O Lord! I thank Thee. How have I deserved this happy lot? "I have chosen to be an abject in the house of my God, rather than to dwell in the tabernacles of sinners" (Ps. lxxxiii. 11). Happy indeed am I, O my Jesus! to have left the world; and it is my great desire to perform the vilest office in Thy house, rather than dwell in the proudest royal palaces of men. Receive me then, O Lord, to stay with Thee all my life long; do not chase me away, as I deserve. Be pleased to allow, that among the many good brothers who serve Thee in this house, I, though I am a miserable sinner, may serve Thee also. Many years already have I lived far from Thee. But now that Thou hast enlightened me to know the vanity of the world, and my own foolishness, I will not depart any more from Thy feet, O my Jesus! Thy presence shall animate me to fight when I am tempted. The nearness of Thy abode shall remind me of the obligation I am under to love Thee, and always to have recourse to Thee in my combats against hell. I will always keep near to Thee, that I may unite myself to Thee, and attach myself closer to Thee. I love Thee, O my God! hidden in this sacrament. Thou for the love of me remainest always on this altar. I, for the love of Thee, will always remain in Thy presence as much as I shall be able. There enclosed Thou always lovest me, and here enclosed I will always love Thee. Always then, O my Jesus, my love, my all! shall we remain together, in time in this house and during eternity in paradise. This is my hope; so may it be.

Most holy Mary, obtain for me a greater love for the Most Holy Sacrament.

Consideration XII.

The Life of Religious resembles the Life of Jesus Christ.

THE Apostle says that the eternal Father predestinates to the kingdom of heaven those only who live conformably to the life of the incarnate Word: "Whom he foreknew, he also predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son" (Rom. viii. 29). How happy, then, and secure of paradise should not religious be, seeing that God has called them to a state of life which of all states is the most conformed to the life of Jesus Christ.

Jesus on this earth wished to live poor as the son and helpmate of a mechanic, in a poor dwelling, with poor clothing and poor food: "Being rich, he became poor for your sake, that through his poverty you might be rich" (2 Cor. viii. 9). Moreover, he chose a life the most entirely mortified, far from the delights of the world, and always full of pain and sorrow, from his birth to his death : hence by the prophet he was called "The Man of sorrows" (Isa. liii. 3). By this he wished to give his servants to understand what should be the life of those who wished to follow him: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me" (Matt. xvi. 24). According to this example, and to this invitation of Jesus Christ, the saints have endeavored to dispossess themselves of all earthly goods, and to load themselves with pains and crosses, in order thus to follow Christ, their beloved Lord. Thus acted St. Benedict, who, being the son of the lord of Noricia, and a relative of the Emperor Justinian, and born amidst the riches and the pleasures of the world, while yet a youth of only fourteen years went to live in a cavern on Mount Subiaco, where he received no other sustenance but a piece of bread brought him every day as an alms by the hermit Romanus.

So acted St. Francis of Assisi, who renounced in favor of his father the whole lawful portion of his inheritance, even to the shirt he had on his back, and thus, poor and mortified, consecrated himself to Jesus Christ. Thus St. Francis Borgia, St. Aloysius Gonzaga, the one being duke of Candia, the other of Castiglione, left all their riches, their estates, their vassals, their country, their house, their parents, and went to live a poor life in religion.

So have acted many other noblemen and princes, even of royal blood. Blessed Zedmerra, daughter of the king of Ethiopia, renounced the kingdom to become a Dominican nun. Blessed Johanna of Portugal renounced the kingdom of France and England to become a nun. In the Benedictine Order alone there are found twenty-five emperors, and seventy-five kings and queens, who left the world to live poor, mortified, and forgotten by the world in a poor cloister. Ah! indeed, these and not the grandes of the world are the truly fortunate ones.

At present, worldlings think these to be fools, but in the valley of Josaphat they shall know that they themselves have been the fools; and when they see the saints on their thrones crowned by God, they shall say, lamenting and in despair: "These are they whom we had sometime in derision. . . . We fools esteemed their life madness. . . . Behold how they are numbered among the children of God, and their lot is among the saints" (Wisd. v. 3, and seq.).

Prayer.

Ah ! my Master and my Redeemer, Jesus, I am then of the number of those fortunate ones whom Thou hast called to follow Thee. O my Lord ! I thank Thee for this. I leave all ; I would I had more to leave, that I might draw near to Thee, my King and my God, who for the love of me, and to give me courage by Thy example, hast chosen for Thyself a life so poor and so painful. Walk on, O Lord ! I will follow Thee. Choose Thou for me what cross Thou wilt, and help me. I will always carry it with constancy and love. I regret that for the past I have abandoned Thee, to follow my lusts and the vanities of the world, but now I will leave Thee no more. Bind me to Thy cross, and if through weakness I sometimes resist, draw me by the sweet bonds of Thy love. Suffer it not that I should ever leave Thee again. Yes, my Jesus, I renounce all the satisfactions of the world : my only satisfaction shall be to continue to love Thee, and to suffer all that pleases Thee. I hope thus to come myself one day in Thy kingdom, to be united to Thee by that bond of eternal love, where, loving Thee in Thy revealed glory, I need no more fear to be loosed and separated from Thee. I love Thee, O my God, my all! and will always love Thee.

Behold my hope, O most holy Mary, thou who, because the most conformed to Jesus, art now the most powerful to obtain this grace. Be thou my protectress!

Consideration XIII.

*The Zeal which Religious ought to have for the Salvation of Souls.*¹

HE who is called to the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer will never be a true follower of Jesus Christ, and will never become a saint, if he fulfils not the end of his vocation, and has not the spirit of the Institute, which is the salvation of souls, and of those souls who are the most destitute of spiritual succor, such as the poor people in the country.

¹ Although in this consideration, and in some other passages, St. Alphonsus may have had specially in view the Congregation of Missionaries, which he founded, yet the subject refers to all religious of both sexes, and to all persons who serve God. All are called to exercise directly or indirectly this charitable apostolate—every one, according to his talent or his means, whether by a generous co-operation in the works which have for their object the defence of faith or the conversion of sinners, or by prayer and the other practices of piety. All can share in the magnificent reward that the Lord reserves for his evangelical laborers (Matt. x. 40 et seq.; James v. 20).—ED,

This was truly the end for which our Redeemer came down from heaven, who protests "The Spirit of the Lord . . . hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor" (Luke iv. 18). He sought no other proof of Peter's love for him but this, that he should procure the salvation of souls: "Simon, son of John, lovest thou me? . . . feed my lambs" (John xxi. 17). He did not impose upon him, says St. John Chrysostom, penance, prayers, or other things, but only that he should endeavor to save his lambs: "Christ said not to him, Throw your money away, practise fasting, fatigue your body with hard work; but he said: Feed my lambs." And he declares that he would look upon every benefit conferred on the least of our neighbors as conferred on himself: "Amen, I say to you, as long as you did it to one of these my least brethren, you did it to me" (Matt. xxv. 40).

Every religious should, therefore, with the utmost care entertain within himself this zeal, and this spirit of helping souls. To this end every one should direct his studies, and when he shall afterwards have been assigned to his work by his Superiors, he should give to it all his thoughts, and his whole attention. He could not call himself a true member of this Congregation who, through the desire of attending only to himself and of leading a retired and solitary life, would not accept with all affection such an employment when imposed on him by obedience.

What greater glory can a man have, than to be, as St. Paul says, a co-operator with God in this great work of the salvation of souls? He who loves the Lord ardently, is not content to be alone in loving him: he would draw all to his love, saying with David: "O magnify the Lord with me, and let us extol his name together" (Ps. xxxiii. 4). Hence St. Augustine exhorts all those who love God, "If you love God, draw all men to his love" (In Ps. xxxiii. en. 2).

A good ground to hope for his own salvation has he who with true zeal labors for the salvation of souls. "Have you saved a soul," says St. Augustine: "then you have predestinated your own."

The Holy Ghost promises us: "When thou shalt pour out thy soul to the hungry:" When thou shalt have labored for the welfare of a poor man; "and shalt satisfy the afflicted soul :” And by thy labor shalt have filled him (with divine grace); “ the Lord will give thee rest continually, and will fill thy soul with brightness:” The Lord will fill thee with light and peace (Isa. lviii. 10, 11). In this, namely, in procuring the salvation of others, St. Paul placed his hope of eternal salvation, when he said to his disciples of Thessalonica : “ For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of glory ? Are not you, in the presence of Our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming ?” (1 Thess. ii. 19.)

Prayer.

O my Lord Jesus Christ ! how can I thank Thee enough, since Thou hast called me to the same work that Thou didst Thyself on earth, namely, to go with my poor exertions and help souls to their salvation. How have I deserved this honor and this reward, after having offended Thee so grievously, and been the cause to others also of offending Thee ? Yes, O my Lord ! Thou callest me to help Thee in this great undertaking. I will serve Thee with all my strength. Behold, I offer Thee all my labor, and even my blood, in order to obey Thee. Nor do I by this aspire to satisfy my own inclination, or to gain applause and esteem from men: I desire nothing but to see Thee loved by all, as Thou deservest. I prize my happy lot, and call myself fortunate, that Thou hast chosen me for this great work, in which I protest that I will renounce all praises of men, and all self-satisfaction, and will only seek Thy glory. To Thee be all the honor and satisfaction, and to me only the discomforts, the blame, and the reproaches. Accept, O Lord! this offering, which I, a miserable sinner, who wishes to love Thee and to see Thee loved by others, make of myself to Thee, and give me strength to execute it.

Most holy Mary, my advocate, who lovest souls so much, help me.

Consideration XIV.

How Necessary to Religious are the Virtues of Meekness and Humility.

OUR most lovely Redeemer Jesus willed to be called a lamb for this very reason that he might show us how meek and humble he was himself. These were the virtues which he principally wished his followers should learn from him: "Learn from me, because I am meek and humble of heart" (Matt. xi. 29).

And these virtues he principally requires from religious, who profess to imitate his most holy life.

He who lives as a solitary in a desert has not so much need of these virtues; but for him who lives in a Community, it is impossible not to meet now and then with a reprimand from his Superiors, or something disagreeable from his companions. In such cases a religious who loves not meekness will commit a thousand faults every day, and live an unquiet life. He must be all sweetness with everybody, with strangers, with companions, and also with inferiors, if he should ever become Superior; and if he is an inferior, he must consider that one act of meekness in bearing contempt and reproach is of greater value to him than a thousand fasts and a thousand disciplines.

St. Francis said that many make their perfection consist in exterior mortifications, and after all are not able to bear one injurious word. "Not understanding," he added, "how much greater gain is made by patiently bearing injuries." How many persons, as St. Bernard remarks, are all sweetness when nothing is said or done contrary to their inclination, but show their want of meekness, when anything crosses them!

And if one should ever be Superior, let him believe that one reprimand made with meekness will profit his subjects more than a thousand made with severity. "The meek are useful to themselves and to others" (In Act. hom. 6), as St. John Chrysostom teaches. In a word, as the same saint said, the greatest sign of a virtuous soul is, to see it meek on occasions of contradiction. A meek heart is the pleasure of the heart of God. "That which is agreeable to him is faith and meekness" (Ecclus. i. 34). It would be well for a religious to represent to himself in his meditations all the contrarieties that may happen to him, and thus arm himself against them; and then when the occasion happens, he should do violence to himself, that he may not be excited, and break out in impatience. Therefore he should refrain from speaking, when his mind is disturbed, till he is certain that he has become calm again.

But to bear injuries quietly, it is above all necessary to have a great fund of humility. He who is truly humble is not only unmoved when he sees himself despised, but is even pleased and rejoices at it in spirit, however the flesh may resent it; for he sees himself treated as he deserves.

and made conformable to Jesus Christ, who, worthy as he was of every honor, chose for the love of us to be satiated with contempt and injuries. Brother Juniper, a disciple of St. Francis, when an injury was done to him, held up his cowl, as if he expected to receive pearls falling from heaven. The saints have been more desirous of injuries than worldlings are covetous of applause and honor. And of what use is a religious who does not know how to bear contempt for God's sake? He is always proud, and only humble in name and a hypocrite, whom divine grace will repulse, as the Holy Ghost says: "God resisteth the proud, but to the humble he giveth grace" (1 Peter v. 5).

Prayer.

O my most humble Jesus, who for the love of me, didst humble Thyself, and become obedient unto the death of the cross! how have I the courage to appear before Thee, and call myself Thy follower? for I see myself to be such a sinner and so proud, that I cannot bear a single injury without resenting it. Whence can come such pride in me, who for my sins have so many times deserved to be cast forever into hell with the devils? Ah, my despised Jesus, help me and make me conformable to Thee. I will change my life. Thou for love of me hast borne so much contempt; I for love of Thee will bear every injury. Thou, O my Redeemer! hast rendered contempt too honorable and desirable, since Thou hast embraced it with so much love during Thy own life. "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Gal. vi. 14).

O my most humble mistress Mary, mother of God! thou who wast in all, and especially in suffering, the most conformed to thy Son, obtain for me the grace to bear in peace all injuries which henceforward shall be offered to me. Amen.

Consideration XV.

How much Religious should confide in the Patronage of Mary.

IF it is true—and most true it is—that, according to the saying of St. Peter Damian, the divine mother, the most holy Mary, loves all men with such an affection, that after God there is not, nor can there be, any one who surpasses or equals her in her love: "She loves us with an invincible love" (In Nat. B. V. s. 1), how much must we think this great queen loves religious who have consecrated their liberty, their life, and their all to the love of Jesus Christ. She sees well enough that the life of such as these is more conformable to her own life, and to that of her divine Son; she sees them often occupied in praising her, and continually attentive to honor her by their novenas, visits, rosaries, fasts, etc. She beholds them often at her feet, intent on invoking her aid, asking graces of her, and graces all conformed to her holy desires, i.e., the grace of perseverance in the divine service, of strength in their temptations, of detachment from this world, and of love towards God. Ah, how can we doubt that she employs all her power and her mercy for the benefit of religious, and especially of those who belong to this holy Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer, in which, as it is well known, we make special profession of honoring the Virgin Mother by visits, by fasting on Saturdays, by special mortifications during her novenas, etc., and by everywhere promoting devotion to her by sermons and novenas in her honor.

She, the great mistress, is grateful. "I love those who love me" (Prov. viii. 17). Yes, she is so grateful, that, as St. Andrew of Crete says: "To him who does her the least service she is accustomed to return great favors" (In Dorm. B. V. s. 3). She promises liberally those who love her and who promote her honor among others, to deliver them from sin. "Those that work by me shall not sin" (Off. of the Blessed Virgin). She also promises to them paradise. "Those that explain me, shall have life everlasting" (Ibid.). For which reason we especially should thank God for having called us to this Congregation, in which by the usages of the Community and the example of our companions we are often reminded, and in some way constrained, to have recourse to Mary, and continually to honor this our most loving mother, who is called, and is, the joy, the hope, the life, and the salvation of those who invoke and honor her.

Prayer.

My most beloved, most lovely, and most loving Queen, I always thank my Lord and thee, who hast not only drawn me out of the world, but also called me to live in this Congregation, where a special devotion to thee is practised. Accept of me, then, my mother, to serve thee. Among so many of thy beloved sons do not scorn to let me serve thee also, miserable though I am. Thou after God shalt be always my hope and my love. In all my wants, in all my tribulations and temptations, I will always have recourse to thee; thou shalt be my refuge, my consolation. I am unwilling that any but God and thou shouldst comfort me in my combats, in the sadness and the tediousness of this life. For thy service I renounce all the kingdoms of the whole world. My kingdom on this earth shall be to serve, bless, and love thee, O my most lovely mistress, "whom to serve is to reign." Thou art the mother of perseverance; obtain for me to be faithful to thee until death. By so doing I hope, and firmly hope, one day to come where thou reignest, to praise and bless thee forever, to depart no more from thy holy feet. Jesus and Mary, I protest with your loving servant Alphonsus Rodriguez, "my most sweet loves, let me suffer for you, let me die for you, let me be all yours, and not at all my own."

Exhortation to Religious to Advance in the Perfection of their State.

GOD has especially chosen religious from among the men of the world, that they may spread his glory and love him with a love more particular and pure than that which they bear to him, who live in the world, occupied in its affairs. To this end has the Lord, by a special vocation, drawn them out of the darkness of Egypt, and freed them from the love of the world; and so moved by divine grace, they have consecrated themselves to God by their holy vows, renouncing all the goods that this world promises and gives to its followers. And therefore it is, that each monastery of religious, which is found on earth, should be considered as a company of men, who, detached from every earthly thought, are mindful of nothing but to live only for God, so that God may glory in them and say: These are all mine, they are my delight.

But, I ask, can the Lord nowadays say of all the religious now living. they are my delight? Alas! the Church laments, because she sees in her religious a general relaxation of spirit, united with a great coldness in the service of God. It cannot be denied, that, amongst so many, there are some who live as good religious, free from worldly attachments, intent on becoming saints and bringing souls to God. There are such, whom I call judges, who shall, one day, in the Valley of Josaphat, judge their brethren; but these good religious, these judges, how many are they? O God! they are too few, it is evident enough, and therefore the Church laments with all those that love the glory of God.

It is not becoming to my littleness to talk here as a censor, and to note down the defects into which nowadays religious commonly fall, whereby, instead of giving edification by their example, they are the objects of talk, and give scandal to others. But some one will say: You, who set up for a reformer, tell us what those common defects are. Tell us what we have to do to be good religious. I answer, I pretend not to reform the world, and therefore will not undertake to declare in particular the faults that have nowadays become common. To you who ask me thus, I say only that you know full well what you have to do in order to be a good religious ; in your novitiate you were fully instructed by good masters in the practice of the virtues which you had afterwards to practise in religion, that is, obedience, detachment from earthly affections, the love of poverty the abnegation of yourself, the desire of being humbled, and those other virtues that are necessary to live as a good religious. But since in these times lukewarmness and relaxation have become general, and since religious pay little attention to the obligations of their state, as a consequence they care little about mending these defects.

Oh, would to God that all religious might preserve at least the half of that good life they began to lead in their novitiate ! For the most part, the novices who persevere to make their profession, live in fervor of spirit and give edification ; but the evil is, that, after having made the vows, and applied themselves to their studies, they at once begin to grow lukewarm, and neglect to preserve the spirit they acquired and to put in execution the good resolutions which they made in the novitiate. so that, as time goes on, they fall more and more from it every day, and multiply their faults.

When afterwards they are appointed to teach others, this relaxation increases; thenceforward they are little solicitous to do anything for the glory of God, but think only of advancing their own interest by pressing on to higher stations, so as then to be able to live a life of less subjection, and greater comfort.

It was with the best intention that religious Orders have established these degrees, through which the religious must advance, in order by instructing the ignorant and arousing the lukewarm to fervor, to promote the good of souls. But the misfortune is, that with many religious the means have become the end, for by the lapse of time they think less of the good of religion and of souls than of their own temporal advantage. I protest again that I do not pretend to play the reformer, but I see that from this spring up in the religious Orders all kinds of ambition, and in consequence every species of spiritual decay. Hence I conclude, that it would be much better were the masters, after having finished their course, to remain in the same humble degree in which they were when they came out of the novitiate. For then each one would think of fulfilling the duties of his office, not for private ends, but only to accomplish the will of God, and to obey his Superiors. But on becoming teachers they get a better room, other comforts and pre-eminences, and this is the reason why so few religious make progress in spirit, and give to others the edification that they should; and thence it comes that all good persons lament, when they see that general relaxation in the Orders, which is now but too evident to all. Where shall we, generally speaking, nowadays find in religious the spirit of obedience, of poverty, of mortification, of interior abnegation? where the love for solitude, for a hidden life, the desire of being despised, which we find in the saints? These kinds of virtue have become strange things, and even the name of them seems to be lost!

But what would be the remedy for so great and universal an evil? What shall I say? The remedy has to come from heaven, and therefore we should pray to the Lord that he may in his mercy remedy it by his own power; because, as the good spirit of religious communicates itself to seculars, so do they also participate in their relaxation. I, for my part, believe that this decay in the religious Orders comes for the most part from the want and neglect of mental prayer, and this comes from the want of retirement and recollection. Experience shows too well that the more certain persons treat with men, the less they desire to treat with God ; and the more they become familiar with the world, the more God retires from them. "Willingly would I," said our Lord one day to St. Teresa, "speak to many souls, but the world makes so much noise in their hearts, that my voice cannot be heard." Immersed, as many religious are, in the affairs of the world, they think little of uniting themselves more closely to God. They would like to get out of the mire of their tepidity, and free themselves from the earthly attachments, in which they find themselves entangled ; but their passions, which they make no effort to overcome, always draw them downwards, and thus they lose the love of mental prayer.

The old monks gave much time to mental prayer, and in this way they became saints ; and, by the edification that they gave, they also sanctified others. But nowadays all fails, because the spirit of prayer is wanting, and therefore religious are without humility, without detachment from the world, and without love of God ; and the love of God being wanting, as a consequence other virtues are wanting too. Let us, then, beseech Jesus Christ, who alone is able to remedy so great an evil ; let us beseech him to infuse into religious his holy love, and the desire of becoming saints. For it seems that religious at present have even lost the desire of becoming saints. Every one sees the need there is of a general reform in the religious Orders, in the priests, and in the seculars. As the corruption of manners has everywhere become so general, we should repeat every day the prayer of David, which in these times is much to the purpose : "O Lord, the vineyard, Thy Church, planted by Thy Son, at the cost of his Blood, is in ruin on all sides : visit and restore it ; Thou, who alone canst restore it" (Ps. lxxix. 15).

Answer to a Young Man who asks Counsel on the Choice of a State of Life.

I READ in your letter that some time ago you felt inspired by God to become a religious, and that afterwards many doubts arose in your mind, and especially this one, that, without becoming a religious, you might sanctify yourself also in the world.

I will answer your letter briefly, for, should you wish to read something more complete, you can read a little work of mine, which has already been printed, under the title "Counsels concerning Religious Vocation," in which I have treated this matter more fully. Here I will only say, briefly, that this point of the choice of a state of life is of the greatest importance, as upon it depends our eternal salvation. He who chooses the state to which God calls him will save himself with facility; and for him who does not obey the divine call it will be difficult—yes, morally impossible—to save himself. The greatest number of those who are damned, are damned for not having corresponded to the call of God.

In order, therefore, that you may be able to choose that state which will be the surest for attaining eternal salvation, consider that your soul is immortal, and that the only end for which God has placed you in this world was, not certainly that you may acquire money and honors on this earth, and thus live a comfortable and delightful life, but that by holy virtues you may merit eternal life, "and the end life everlasting" (Rom. v. 22). In the day of judgment it will avail you nothing to have advanced your family, and to have made a figure in the world; it will only avail you to have served and loved Jesus Christ, who is to be your judge.

You have a thought which tells you that you will also be able to sanctify yourself by remaining in the world. Yes, my dear sir, you will be able; but it is difficult, and if you are truly called by God to the religious state, and yet remain in the world, it is, as I have said above, morally impossible, because those helps will be denied you which God has prepared for you in religion, and without them you will not save yourself. To sanctify yourself it is necessary for you to employ the means,—such as, to avoid evil occasions, to remain detached from earthly goods, to live a life recollected in God ; and to maintain this, it is necessary to receive the sacraments frequently, to make your meditation, your spiritual reading, and to perform other devout exercises every day, otherwise it is impossible to preserve the spirit of fervor. Now, it is difficult, not to say impossible, to practise all this in the midst of the noise and the disturbances of the world ; for family affairs, the necessities of the house, the complaints of parents, the quarrels and persecutions with which the world is so full, will keep your mind so occupied by cares and fears that you will barely be able in the evening to recommend yourself to God, and even this will be done with many distractions. You would wish to make your meditation, to read spiritual books, to receive Holy Communion often, to visit every day the Sacrament of the altar ; but from all this you will be prevented by the affairs of the world, and the little you do will be imperfect, because it is done in the midst of a thousand distractions, and with coldness of heart. Your life will thus be always unquiet, and your death more unquiet still.

On one side, worldly friends will not fail to inspire you with a fear of embracing the religious life, as being a hard life and full of troubles. On the other, the world offers you amusements, money, and a contented life. Reflect well, and do not allow yourself to be led into error. Be persuaded that the world is a traitor that makes promises and does not care about the fulfilment of them. It offers you indeed all these earthly things, but suppose it should give them to you, could it also give you peace of soul? No, God only can give true peace. The soul is created only for God, to love him in this life and to enjoy him in the next, and therefore God only can content it. All the pleasures and riches of the earth cannot give true peace; nay, those who in this life abound the most with such goods are the most troubled and afflicted, as Solomon confesses, who had them in abundance. "All," says he, "is vanity, and affliction of spirit" (Eccles. i. 14). If the world, with its goods, could make us happy, the rich, the great, the monarchs, who are in no want of wealth, honors, and amusements, would be fully contented. But experience shows how it is with these mighty ones of the earth: the greater they are, the greater are the vexations, fears, and afflictions they have to suffer. A poor Capuchin lay-brother, who goes about girded with a cord over a sackcloth, who lives on beans, and sleeps in a small cell on a little straw, is more contented than a prince with all his gilded trappings and riches, who has every day a sumptuous table, and who goes half sick to bed under a rich canopy, unable to sleep on account of the anguish which drives sleep away. He is a fool who loves the world and not God, said St. Philip Neri; and if these worldlings live such an unquiet life, much more unquiet still will be their death, when the priest, at their side, will intimate to them that they are about to be chased away from this world, saying: "Depart hence, Christian soul, from this world. Embrace the crucifix, for this world is at an end for you." The misery is, that in the world they think little of God, and just as little of the next life, where they must remain forever. All, or almost all, their thoughts are given to the things of this earth, and this is the cause that their life is so unhappy, and their death still more.

Nevertheless, that you may ascertain what state you ought to embrace, imagine yourself at the point of death, and choose that one which you would then wish to have chosen. Should you have erred, by neglecting the divine call, in order to follow your own inclinations, and to live with more liberty, there will then be no longer time to remedy the error. Consider that everything here below will come to an end. "The fashion of this world passeth away" (1 Cor. vii. 31). The scenes of this world must finish for each one of us. Everything passes, and death draws near; and at every step we take, we approach nearer to it, and, through death, nearer to eternity. For this we are born. "Man shall go into the house of his eternity" (Eccles. xii. 5). Death will be upon us when we least think of it. Alas! when death draws near, what will then appear all the goods of this world, but the unreal pageantry of a theatre,—vanities, lies, and foolishness? And what profit will it then be, as Jesus Christ warns us, "if we should have gained the whole world and lost our souls"? (Matt. xvi. 26.) It will help us only to die an unhappy death.

On the contrary, a young man who has left the world to give himself entirely to Jesus Christ, how contented will he feel, as he passes his days in the solitude of his cell far from the tumult of the world and the dangers of losing God, which are in the world ! In the monastery he will not have the entertainments of music, theatres, and balls, but he will have God to console him and to make him enjoy peace. I mean all that peace, which is possible in this valley of tears, into which every one is sent to suffer, and to merit by his patience that full peace which is prepared for him in heaven. But in this life even, far from the pastimes of the world, one loving look cast from time to time on the crucifix, one "Deus meus, et omnia," pronounced with affection, one "my God" said with a sigh of love, will console him more than all the pastimes and feasts of the world, which leave only bitterness behind them.

And if he lives content in such a life, more content will he be still at his death at having chosen the religious state. How much will it then console him to have spent his life in prayer, in spiritual reading, in mortification, and in other exercises of devotion, especially if he has been in an Order employed in saving souls by preaching and hearing confessions,—things which at his death will all increase his confidence in Jesus Christ, who is truly grateful and liberal in rewarding those who have labored for his glory !

But let us come to a conclusion with regard to your vocation. Since the Lord has called you to leave the world, and to be entirely his in religion, I tell you : Rejoice and tremble at the same time. Rejoice, on the one hand, and always thank the Lord, because to be called by God to a perfect life is a grace which he does not give to all : "He hath not done in like manner to every nation" (Ps. cxlvii. 20). On the other hand, tremble, because if you do not follow the divine call, you will put your eternal salvation in great danger. It is not my intention here to relate to you the many examples of young men who, because they made no account of their vocation, have lived a miserable life and died a horrible death. Hold for certain that, as God has called you, you will never have peace, if you remain in the world ; and at your death you will be very unquiet, on account of the remorse that then will torment you, for having neglected to obey God, who had called you to the religious state.

At the end of your letter you express a wish to learn from me whether, in case you should not have the courage to enter religion, it would be better to marry, as your parents wish, or to become a secular priest.

I answer: The married state I cannot recommend to you, because St. Paul does not counsel it to any one, except there be a necessity for it, arising out of habitual incontinence, which necessity, I hold for certain, does not exist in your case.

With regard, then, to the state of a secular priest,¹ take notice that a secular priest has on him all the obligations of a priest, and all the distractions and dangers of a layman; for, living in the midst of the world, he cannot avoid the troubles which arise from his own household and from his parents, and cannot be free from the dangers to which his soul is exposed. He will have temptations in his own house, being unable to exclude women from it, whether relatives or servants, nor prevent other strangers from coming to see them. You should then stay there altogether retired in a separate room, and attend only to divine things. Now, this it is very difficult to practise; and therefore small, and very small, is the number of those priests who attend to their perfection in their own houses.

On the contrary, entering a monastery of strict observance, you will be freed from the disagreeable duty of thinking about your food and clothing, because there the Order provides you with all, there you will not have your parents to come and continually trouble you with all the disturbances that happen in their house ; there no women enter to disturb your mind ; and thus, far from the tumult of the world, you will have no one to hinder you in your prayers and your recollection.

¹ In Italy we often see priests who live with their parents or relatives.—ED.

I have said a monastery of strict observance ; because if you want to enter another, where they live more freely, it is better for you to stay at home and attend there to the salvation of your soul as well as you can ; for entering an Order where the spirit is relaxed, you expose yourself to the danger of being lost. Though you should enter with the resolution to attend to prayer and to the things of God only, yet, carried along by the bad example of your companions, and seeing yourself derided and even persecuted, if you do not live as they do, you will leave off all your devotions, and do as the others do, as experience shows it to be commonly the case. But should God give you the grace of vocation, be careful to preserve it, by recommending yourself often to Jesus and Mary in holy prayer. I know that if you resolve to give yourself entirely to God, the devil from that moment will increase his efforts to tempt you to fall into sin, and especially to make you entirely his, and to remain his.

I conclude by offering you the assurance of my respectful consideration; I pray the Lord to make you belong entirely to himself, and remain, etc.

Advice to a young Person in Doubt about the State of Life which She ought to Embrace.¹

Y DEAR SISTER IN JESUS CHRIST :

You are deliberating about the choice of a state of life. I see that you are agitated because the world wishes you to belong to itself, and to enter the married state ; and, on the other hand, Jesus Christ wishes you to give yourself to him by becoming a nun in some convent of exact observance.

Remember that on the choice which you make your eternal salvation will depend. Hence I recommend you, as soon as you read this advice, to implore the Lord, every day, to give you light and strength to embrace that state which will be most conducive to your salvation ; that thus you may not afterwards, when your error is irreparable, have to repent of the choice you have made for your whole life, and for all eternity.

¹ The holy author supposes in this case, as well as in the preceding answer, that the person to whom this advice is addressed is called to be a religious, or has at least the beginning of a vocation to the religious state, but the world keeps her back, and she hesitates. This supposition does not, however, hold good as regards a following letter that treats of the spiritual exercises.—ED.

Examine whether you will be more happy in having for your spouse a man of the world, or Jesus Christ, the Son of God and the King of heaven ; see which of them appears to you the better spouse, and then make your choice. At the age of thirteen, the holy virgin St. Agnes was, on account of her extraordinary beauty, sought after by many. Among the rest, the son of the Roman Prefect asked her for his spouse ; but looking at Jesus Christ, who wished her to belong to him, she said, I have found a spouse better than you and all the monarchs of this world ; therefore I cannot exchange him for any other. And rather than exchange him she was content to lose her life, and cheerfully suffered martyrdom for Jesus Christ. The holy virgin Domitilla gave a similar answer to the Count Aurelian ; she, too, died a martyr, and was burned alive, because she would not forsake Jesus Christ. Oh, how happy do these holy virgins now feel in heaven, how happy will they feel for all eternity, at having made so good a choice ! The same happy lot awaits you, and will await all young persons who renounce the world in order to give themselves to Jesus Christ.

In the next place, examine the consequences of the state of the person who chooses the world, and of the person who makes choice of Jesus Christ. The world offers earthly goods, riches, honors, amusements, and pleasures. On the other hand, Jesus Christ presents to you scourges, thorns, opprobrium, and crosses ; for these were the goods which he chose for himself all the days of his mortal life. But then he offers you two immense advantages which the world cannot give—peace of soul in this life, and paradise in the next.

Moreover, before you decide on embracing any state, you must reflect that your soul is immortal ; that is, that after the present life, which will soon end, you must pass into eternity, in which you will receive that place of punishment or of reward which you will have merited by your works during life. Thus you must remain for all eternity in the house either of eternal life or of eternal death, in which, after your departure from this world, it will be your lot first to dwell: you will be either forever saved and happy amid the joys of paradise, or forever lost and in despair in the torments of hell. In the mean time, consider that everything in this world must soon end. Happy all that are saved; miserable the soul that is damned. Keep always in mind that great maxim of Jesus Christ: "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his own soul?" This maxim has sent so many from the world to shut themselves up in the cloister, or to live in the deserts; it has inspired so many young persons with courage to forsake the world in order to give themselves to God and to die a holy death.

On the other hand, consider the unhappy lot of so many ladies of fortune, so many princesses and queens, who in the world have been attended, praised, honored, and almost adored; but if they are damned, what do they now find in hell of so much riches, of so many pleasures, of so many honors enjoyed in this life, but pains and remorse of conscience, which will torment them forever, as long as God shall be God, without any hope of remedy for their eternal ruin.

But let us now cast a glance at the goods which the world gives in this life to its followers, and to the goods which God gives to her who loves him and forsakes the world for his sake. The world makes great promises; but do we not all see that the world is a traitor that promises what it never performs? But though it should fulfil all its promises what does it give? It gives earthly goods, but does it give the peace and the life of happiness which it promises? All its goods delight the senses and the flesh, but do not content the heart and the soul. Our souls have been created by God for the sole purpose of loving him in this life, and of enjoying him in the next. Hence all the goods of the earth, all its delights, and all its grandeurs are outside the heart; they enter not into the soul, which God only can content. Solomon has even called all worldly goods vanities and lies, which do not content but rather afflict the soul. "Vanity of vanities and affliction of spirit" (Eccles. i. 14). This we know also from experience, for we see that the more a person abounds in these goods, the greater her anguish and misery of mind. If by its goods the world gave content to the soul, great indeed should be the happiness of princesses and queens, who want neither amusements, nor comedies, nor festivities, nor banquets, nor splendid palaces, nor beautiful carriages, nor costly dresses, nor precious jewels, nor servants, nor ladies of honor to attend and pay homage to them. But no; they who imagine them to be happy are deceived. Ask them whether they enjoy perfect peace, if they are perfectly content, and they will answer: What peace? what content? They will tell you that they lead a life of misery, and that they know not what peace is. The maltreatment which they receive from their husbands, the displeasure caused by their children, the wants of the house, the jealousies and fears to which they are subject, make them live in the midst of continual anguish and bitterness. Married women may be called martyrs of patience if they bear all with resignation; but unless they are patient and resigned, they will suffer a martyrdom in this world, and a more painful martyrdom in the next.

The remorse of conscience, though they had nothing else to suffer, keeps married persons in continual torment. Being attached to earthly goods, they reflect but little on spiritual things; they seldom approach the sacraments, and seldom recommend themselves to God; and, being deprived of these helps to a good life, they will scarcely be able to live without sin, and without continual remorse of conscience. Behold, then, how all the joys promised by the world become to married persons sources of bitterness, of fears, and of damnation. How many of them will say, Unhappy me, what will become of me after so many sins, after the life which I led, at a distance from God, always going from bad to worse? I would wish for retirement in order to spend a little time in mental prayer, but the affairs of the family and of the house, which is always in confusion, do not permit this. I would wish to hear sermons, to go to confession, to communicate often; I would wish to go often to the church, but my husband does not wish it. My unceasing occupations, the care of children, the frequent visits of friends, keep me confined to the house; and thus it is not without some difficulty that I can hear Mass at a late hour on festivals. How great was my folly in entering the married state, when I could become a saint in a convent! But all these lamentations only serve to increase their pain; because they see that it is no longer in their power to change the unhappy choice they have made of living in the world. . And if their life is unhappy, their death will be much more miserable. At that awful hour they will be surrounded by servants, by their husbands, and children, bathed in tears ; but instead of giving them relief, all these will be to them an occasion of greater affliction. And thus afflicted, poor in merits, and full of fears for their eternal salvation, they must go to present themselves to Jesus Christ to be judged by him. But, on the other hand, how great will be the happiness which a nun who has left the world for Jesus Christ will enjoy, living among so many spouses of God, and in a solitary cell, at a distance from the turmoils of the world, and from the continual and proximate danger of losing God, to which seculars are exposed. How much greater will be her consolation at death, after having spent her years in meditations, mortifications, and in so many spiritual exercises ; in visits to the Holy Sacrament, in confessions, Communions, acts of humility, of hope, and love of Jesus Christ ! And though the devil should endeavor to terrify her by the faults committed in her younger days, her Spouse, for whom she has left the world, will console her ; and thus, full of confidence, she will die in the embraces of her crucified Redeemer, who will conduct her to heaven, that there she may enjoy eternal happiness.

Thus, my dear sister, since you must make choice of a state of life, make the choice now which you shall wish at death to have made. At death, every one who sees that for her the world is about to end says, Oh that I had led the life of a saint! Oh that I had left the world and given myself to God! But what is then done, is done, and nothing remains for her but to breathe forth her soul, and to go to hear from Jesus Christ the words, Come, blessed soul, and rejoice with me for eternity; or, Begone forever to hell, at a distance from me. You, then, must choose the world or Jesus Christ. If you choose the world, you will probably sooner or later repent of the choice; hence you ought to reflect well upon it. In the world the number of persons who are lost is, very great; in religion, the number of those who are damned is very small. Recommend yourself to Jesus crucified, and to most holy Mary, that they may make you choose the state which is most conducive to your eternal salvation. If you wish to become a nun, resolve to become a saint; if you intend to lead a loose and imperfect life, like some religious, it is useless for you to enter a convent; you should then only lead an unhappy life and die an unhappy death. But if you resolve not to become a religious, I cannot advise you to enter the married state, for St. Paul does not counsel that state to any one, except in case of necessity, which I hope does not exist for you. At least remain in your own house and endeavor to become a saint. I entreat you to say the following prayer for nine days :

My Lord Jesus Christ, who hast died for my salvation, I implore Thee, through the merits of Thy Passion, to give me light and strength to choose that state which is best for my salvation. And do thou, O my Mother Mary! obtain this grace for me by thy powerful intercession.

Discourse to Pious Maidens.

Y DEAR SISTERS IN JESUS CHRIST:
I do not intend to explain the privileges and blessings acquired by those maidens who consecrate their virginity to Jesus Christ; I shall only glance at them.

Excellence of Virginity.

First, they become in the eyes of God as beautiful as the angels of heaven: "They shall be as the angels of God in heaven" (Matt. xxii. 30). Baronius (Ann. 480) relates that upon the death of a holy virgin named Georgia an immense multitude of doves was seen flying around her; and when the body was carried to the church, they ranged themselves along that part of the roof which corresponded to the situation of the corpse, and did not leave until she was buried. Those doves were thought to be angels who accompanied that virginal body.

Moreover, a maiden who leaves the world, and dedicates herself to Jesus Christ, becomes his spouse. In the Gospel our Redeemer is called Father, or Master, or Shepherd of our souls; but with regard to those virgins he calls himself their Spouse; they "went out to meet the Bridegroom" (Matt. xxv. 1).

When a young woman wishes to establish herself in the world, she will examine, if she be prudent, which of all her suitors is the most noble and the richest. Let us then learn from the Spouse in the sacred Canticles, who well knows—let us learn from her what manner of spouse is he whom consecrated virgins aspire to. Tell me, O sacred Spouse, what manner of spouse is he who makes you the most fortunate of women? "My Beloved is white, she says, and ruddy, chosen among thousands" (Cant. v. 10). He is all white by reason of his purity; and ruddy, by reason of the love with which he burns. He is, in fine, so noble and so kind as to be the most amiable of spouses.

With reason, then, did the glorious virgin St. Agnes, as we learn from St. Ambrose, when it was proposed to her to marry the son of the Prefect of Rome, reply that she had a much more advantageous match in view (De Virg. l. 1). When some ladies were endeavoring to persuade St. Domitilla to marry Count Aurelian, nephew of the Emperor Domitian, saying there was no obstacle, as he was willing that she should remain a Christian, the saint replied, Tell me, if a monarch and a clown both pretended to a maiden, which would she choose? Now, should I marry Aurelian, I would have to leave the King of heaven; it would be folly—I will not do so. And thus, in order to remain faithful to Jesus Christ, to whom she had already consecrated her virginity, she was willing to be burned alive—a death which her barbarous suitor caused her to suffer (Croiset, Exerc. 12 Mai).

Those spouses of Jesus Christ who leave the world for his sake become his beloved; they are called the first-fruits of the Lamb: "The first-fruits to God and to the Lamb" (Apoc. xiv. 4). Why the first-fruits? Because, says Cardinal Hugo, as the first-fruits are more grateful than any other to man, so virgins are dearer to God than any others. The divine Spouse feeds amongst the lilies: "Who feeds amongst the lilies" (Cant. ii. 16). And what is meant by lilies, if not those devout maidens who consecrate their virginity to Jesus Christ? The venerable Bede writes that the song of the virgins—that is, the glory which they give to God by preserving untouched the lily of their purity—is far more pleasing to him than the song of all the other saints.

Wherefore the Holy Ghost says that there is nothing comparable to virginity (Ecclus. xxvi. 20). And hence Cardinal Hugo remarks that dispensations are often granted from other vows, but never from the vow of chastity; and the reason is, because no other treasure can compensate for the loss of that. And it is for the same reason that theologians say the Blessed Mother would have consented to forego the dignity of Mother of God could it have been had only at the expense of her virginity.

Who on this earth can conceive the glory which God has prepared for his virgin spouses in paradise? Theologians say that virgins have in heaven their own "aureola," or special crown of glory, which is refused to the other saints who are not virgins.

But let us come at once to the most important point in our discourse.

This young woman will say, Cannot I become holy in the married state? I do not wish to give you the reply in my own words; hear those of St. Paul, and you will see the difference between the married woman and the virgin: "And the unmarried woman and the virgin thinketh on the things of the Lord, that she may be holy, both in body and in spirit; but she that is married, thinketh on the things of the world, how she may please her husband" (1 Cor. vii. 34). And the Apostle adds: "And this I speak for your profit, not to cast a snare upon you, but for that which is decent, and which may give you power to attend upon the Lord without impediment" (Ibid. 35).

In the first place, I say that married persons can be holy in the spirit, but not in the flesh; on the contrary, virgins who have consecrated their virginity to Jesus Christ are holy both in soul and body. Holy both in body and in spirit; and mark those other words, to attend upon the Lord without impediment. Oh, how many obstacles have not married women to encounter in serving the Lord! And the more noble they are the greater the obstacles. A woman to become holy must adopt the necessary means, which are, much mental prayer, constant use of the sacraments, and continual thought of God. But what time has a married woman for thinking upon God? "She that is married thinketh on the things of the world," says St. Paul. The married woman has to think of providing her family with food and raiment. She has to think of rearing her children, of pleasing her husband and her husband's relatives; whence, as the Apostle says, her heart is divided between God, her husband, and her children. Her husband must be attended to; the children cry and scream, and are continually asking for a thousand things. What time can she have to attend to mental prayer, who can scarce attend to all the business of the house? How can she pray amid so many distracting thoughts and disturbances? Scarcely can she go to church, to recollect herself, and communicate upon the Sunday. She may have the good desire, but it will be difficult for her to attend to the things of God as she ought. It is true that in this want of opportunities she may gain merit, by resignation to the will of God, who requires of her, in that state, chiefly patience and resignation; but in the midst of so many distractions and annoyances, without prayer, without meditation, without frequenting the sacraments, it will be morally impossible for her to have that holy patience and resignation.

But would to God that married women had no other evil to contend with besides that of not always being able to attend to their sanctification as much as they should! The greater evil is the danger to which they are continually exposed of losing the grace of God, by reason of the intercourse which they must continually have with the relatives and friends of their husband, as well in their own houses as in the houses of others. Unmarried women do not understand this, but married women and those who have to hear their confessions know it well. Let us, however, now have done with the unhappy life which is led by married women, the ill-treatment that they receive from their husbands, the disobedience of children, the wants of a family, the annoyance of mothers-in-law and relatives, the throes of childbirth, always accompanied by danger of death, not to mention the afflictions of jealousy, and scruples of conscience with regard to the rearing-up of their children,—all of this breeds a tempest under which poor married women have continually to groan; and God grant that in this tempest they may not lose themselves, so as to meet with hell in the other world, after having suffered a hell in this! Such is the unenviable lot of those maidens who choose the world!

But what! such a maiden replies, are there no married women holy? Yes, I answer, there are; but who are they? Such only as become holy through their sufferings, by suffering all for God without finding fault, and with continual patience. And how many married women are to be found in such a state of perfection? They are very rare; and if you find any, they are always in sorrow that when they could have done so they did not consecrate themselves to Jesus Christ. Amongst all the devout married women I have known, I never knew one to be satisfied with her condition.

The greatest happiness, then, falls to the lot of those maidens who consecrate themselves to Jesus Christ. Those have to encounter none of the dangers which married women must necessarily be placed in. They are not bound to earth by love of children, or men, or dress, or gallantry, whilst married women are obliged to dress with pomp and ornaments, in order to appear with their equals and please their husbands. A maiden who has given herself to Jesus Christ requires only what dress will cover her; nay, she should give scandal if she were to wear any other, or make use of any ornaments. Moreover, virgins have no anxiety about house or children or relatives; their whole care is centred in pleasing Jesus Christ, to whom they have consecrated their soul, their body, and all their love; whence it is that they have more time, and a mind more disengaged, for frequent prayer and Communion.

But let us now come to the excuses sometimes brought forward by those who are cold in the love of Jesus Christ.

Such a one will say: I should leave the world if I had some convent to go to, or, at least, if I could always spend my time in devotion at the church when I should please; but I could not remain at home, where I have bad brothers who ill-treat me; and, on the other hand, my parents are unwilling to have me frequent the church. But, I ask you, is it in order to save yourself, or lead an easy life, you leave the world? Is it to do your own will or the will of Jesus Christ? If you wish to become holy and serve Jesus Christ, I ask you another question: In what does holiness consist? Holiness does not consist in living in a convent, or spending the entire day in a church, but in being at confession and Communion as often as you can, in obedience, in doing everything assigned you at home, in being retired, in bearing labor and contempt. And if you were to be in a convent, how should you be employed? Do you imagine you should always be either in church or in your cell, or in the refectory, or at recreation? In the convent, although the Sisters have a time marked out for prayer, for Mass, and for Communion, they have also their hours appointed for the business of the house, and more especially the lay-sisters, who, as they do not attend in the choir, have nearly all the labor of the house, and consequently least time for prayer. All exclaim, Let us be in a convent, let us have a convent! How much more easy is it for devout girls to become holy in their own houses than in a convent! How many such have I known to regret having entered a convent, especially when the Community was large, the poor lay-sister in certain offices having scarcely time to say the rosary!

But, Father, such a girl will answer, I have at home a peevish father and mother; I have bad brothers: all of them use me ill; I cannot stand this. Well, I say, and if you marry, will you not have to deal with mothers and sisters-in-law, and perhaps undutiful children, and perhaps a harsh husband? Oh, how many cruel husbands are there not, who when first married promised great things, but shortly afterwards ceased to be husbands, and became the tyrants of their wives, treating them not as companions, but as slaves? Inquire of many married women whether this be not the fact. But, without going beyond your own home, you all know how your mothers fared. One thing, at least, is certain, that all you should have to suffer at home, after having given yourself to God, you should suffer for the love of Jesus Christ, and he knows how to make your cross sweet and light to you. But how dreadful is it not to suffer for the world's sake!—to suffer without merit! Courage, then! If Jesus Christ has called you to his love, and wishes to have you for his spouse, go on joyfully; it will be his care to afford you consolation even in the midst of sufferings. This, of course, will be only in case you truly love him, and live as his spouse.

Means to preserve Virginal Purity.

Hear, then, for the last time, the means that you are to adopt in order to become holy, and live a true spouse of Jesus Christ; and these are, to practise the virtues becoming his spouse. We read in the Gospel that the kingdom of heaven is likened unto virgins. But to what virgins? Not to the foolish, but to the wise. The wise were admitted to the nuptials, but the door was shut in the face of the foolish; to whom the Spouse said, I know you not (Matt. xxv. 1) —you are indeed virgins, but I do not acknowledge you for my spouses. The true spouses of Jesus Christ follow the Spouse whithersoever he goeth. “These follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth” (Apoc. xiv. 4). What is the meaning of following the Lamb? St. Augustine (De Virginit. c. 25) says that it means the imitation of the Lamb both in body and mind. After you have consecrated your body to him, you must consecrate to him your whole heart, so that your heart may be entirely devoted to his love; and, therefore, you must adopt all the means that are necessary for making you belong entirely to Jesus Christ.

1. The first of those means is mental prayer, to which you must be most attentive. But do not imagine that, in order to pray thus, it is necessary for you to be in a convent, or remain all day in the church. It is true that at home there is much disturbance created by the persons there; nevertheless, those who wish can find time and place for prayer: this is in the morning before the others rise, and at night after the others have gone to bed. In order to pray, it is not necessary to be always on bended knees; you can pray whilst laboring, and even when walking out on business (should you have no other opportunity), by raising your soul to God, and thinking on the Passion of Jesus Christ, or any other pious subject.

2. The second means is, the frequentation of the sacraments of confession and Communion. With regard to confession, each one has to make choice of a confessor, whom she is to obey in everything, otherwise she will never walk steadily in the way of perfection. As to Communion, she must not depend solely upon obedience; she must desire it, and ask for it. This divine food must be hungered after; Jesus Christ must be desired. It is frequent Communion that renders his spouses faithful to Jesus Christ, especially in the preservation of holy purity. The Most Holy Sacrament preserves the soul in every virtue; and it appears that its most special effect is to preserve untouched the chastity of virgins, according to the saying of the prophet, who calls this sacrament the corn of the elect, and wine springing forth virgins (Zach. ix. 17).

3. The third means is, retirement and caution: "As the lily amongst the thorns, so is my beloved amongst the daughters" (Cant. ii. 2). For a virgin to think of remaining faithful to Jesus Christ amid the conversations, the jests, and other amusements of the world, is useless; it is necessary that she preserve herself amid the thorns of abstinence and mortification, by using not only the greatest modesty and reserve in speaking with men, but even all austerity and penitential exercises when necessary. Such are the thorns which preserve the lilies; I mean young maidens, who otherwise should soon be lost. The Lord calls the cheeks of his spouse as beautiful as those of the turtle: "Thy cheeks are beautiful as the turtle dove's" (Cant. i. 9). And why so? Because the turtle, by instinct, avoids the company of other birds, and always remains alone. That virgin, then, appears beautiful in the eyes of Jesus Christ who does all that she can to hide herself from the eyes of others. St. Jerome says that Jesus is a jealous spouse (Epist. ad Eust.). Hence he is much displeased when he sees a virgin dedicated to him endeavoring to appear before men to please them. Pious maidens endeavor to appear repulsive, that they may not attract men. The venerable Sister Catharine of Jesus, afterwards a Teresian nun, washed her face with the filthy water of tar, and then designedly exposed her face to the sun, that she might lose her complexion. St. Andregesina having, as we are told by Bollandus, been promised in marriage, prayed the Lord to deform her, and was heard, for she was immediately covered with a leprosy which caused every one to avoid her; and as soon as her suitor had ceased his offers, her former beauty was restored. It is related by James di Viatrico that there was a certain virgin in a convent whose eyes had inflamed a prince. The latter threatened to set fire to the monastery if she would not yield to him; but she plucked out her eyes and sent them to him in a basin, the bearer of which was instructed to say, "Here are the darts which have wounded your heart—take them, and leave me my soul untouched" (Vita S. Ansb. 9 Febr.). The same author tells of St. Euphemia, that, having been promised by her father to a certain count, who left no means untried to obtain her, she, in order to free herself from his addresses, cut off her nose and lips, saying to herself, "Vain beauty, you shall never be to me an occasion of sin!" St. Antoninus tells something similar (and his account is confirmed by Baronius) of the Abbess Ebba, who, fearing an invasion of the barbarians, cut off her nose and upper lip to the teeth ; and that all the other nuns, to the number of thirty, following her example, did the same. The barbarians came, and seeing them so deformed, set fire to the monastery through rage and burned them alive ; and hence the Church, as Baronius tells us, has enrolled them among her martyrs. This is not allowable for others to do ; those saints did so by the especial impulse of the Holy Ghost. But it sufficiently well answers the purpose of showing you what virgins who loved Jesus Christ have done to prevent men from seeking them. Devout virgins at present should at least move as modestly, and be seen as little as possible by men. Should it happen that a virgin should, by chance, and without any fault of hers, receive by violence any insult from men, be it known to you that after it she will remain as pure as before. St. Lucia made an answer of this kind to the tyrant who threatened to dishonor her. " If you do," she said, " and I be so treated against my will, my crown shall be double." It is the consent only that is hurtful ; and know, moreover, that if a virgin be modest and reserved, men will have no inclination to interfere with her.

4. The fourth means of preserving purity is the mortification of the senses. St. Basil says, "A virgin should not be immodest in any respect,—in tongue, ears, eyes, touch, and still less in mind" (De vera Virg.). A virgin, in order to keep herself pure, must be modest in her speech, conversing seldom with men, and that only through necessity, and in few words. Her ears must be pure, by not listening to worldly conversations. Her eyes must be pure, by being either closed, or fixed upon the earth in the presence of men. She must be pure in touch, using therein all possible caution, both as regards herself and others. She must be pure in spirit, by resisting all immodest thoughts, through the help of Jesus and Mary. And to this end she must mortify herself with fasting, abstinence, and other penitential exercises; which things she must not practise without the consent of the confessor, otherwise they should injure her soul by making her proud. Those acts of penance must not be made without the confessor's permission, but they must be desired and sought for; for the confessor, if he does not see the penitent wishing for them, will not give them. Jesus is a spouse of blood, who espoused our souls upon the cross, whereon he shed all his blood for us. "A bloody spouse art thou to me" (Exod. iv. 25). Therefore those spouses who love him, love tribulation, infirmity, sorrows, ill-treatment, and injuries; and receive them not only with patience, but with joy. Thus may we understand that passage which says that "virgins follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth" (Apoc. xiv. 2). They follow their spouse Jesus with joy and gladness whithersoever he goeth, even through sorrow and disgrace, as has been done by so many holy virgins, who have followed him to torments and to death, smiling and rejoicing.

5. Finally, Sisters, in order that you may obtain perseverance in this holy life, you must recommend yourselves often and much to Most Holy Mary, the Queen of Virgins. She is the mediatrix who negotiates those espousals, and brings virgins to espouse her Son. "After her shall virgins be brought to the King" (Ps. xlv. 15). It is she, in fine, who obtains fidelity for those chosen spouses; for, without her assistance, they should be all unfaithful.

Conclusion.

Come on, then, you who intend to live no longer for the world, but for Jesus Christ alone. (I address myself to those who feel themselves called by that divine Spouse to consecrate themselves to his love.) I do not wish that you should make any vow this morning, or oblige yourselves at once to perpetual chastity. You should do that when God inspires you, and your confessor is willing. I only desire you by a simple act, and without any obligation, to thank Jesus Christ for having called you to his love ; and to offer yourselves to him henceforward for your entire lives. Say then to him :

O my Jesus, my God, and my Redeemer ! who hast died for me, compassionate me who burn to call myself Thy spouse. I burn, because I see that Thou hast called me to that honor ; nor do I know how to thank Thee for that grace. I should now have been in hell ; and Thou instead of chastising me, hast called me to be Thy spouse. Yes, my Spouse, I leave the world, I leave all through love of Thee, and give myself entirely to Thee. What world?—

what world do I speak of? My Jesus, henceforward Thou art to be my only good—my only love. I see that Thou wishest to have my entire heart, and I wish to resign it entirely to Thee. Receive me in Thy mercy, and do not reject me as I have deserved that Thou shouldst. Forget all the offences that I have given Thee, of which I repent with my whole soul; would that I had died before offending Thee! Pardon me; inflame me with Thy holy love, and give me Thy aid, in order that I may be faithful to Thee, and never leave Thee more. Thou, my Spouse, hast given Thyself all to me. Behold! I give myself entirely to Thee. Mary, my Queen and my Mother, chain my heart to that of Jesus Christ; and fasten both hearts so that they be never sundered more.

I leave you now my blessing, in order that you may be so bound to Jesus Christ as never again to depart from him. Give your hearts now to Jesus Christ: Say, Jesus my Spouse, henceforward I wish to love only Thee, and nothing else.

A Letter to a Young Student who is Deliberating on the Choice of a State of Life.

I HAVE received your last favor, in which you tell me that you are still undecided as to the state of life you should choose, and that having communicated to your pastor the counsel I gave you, namely, to go for that purpose to perform the spiritual exercises in that house which your father has in the country, the said pastor answered you, that it was not necessary for you to go to that house to torture your brains during eight days in solitude, but that it was enough for you to attend the exercises he would soon give to the people in his own church. Since, then, on this last point of the exercises, you again ask my advice, it is necessary that I should answer you more at length, and show you, first, how much greater the fruit of the spiritual exercises is when they are performed in silence, in some retired place, than when performed whilst they are given in public, when one is obliged during them to go to one's own house, and continues to converse with one's parents and friends; and the more so in your case, as you write to me you have in your house no room to which you may retire. On the other hand, I am very much in favor of those exercises performed in solitude, as I know it is to such I owe my own conversion and my resolution to leave the world. I will then secondly suggest to you the means and precautions to be taken during the exercises, in order to obtain from them the fruit you desire. I beg you, when you have read this letter yourself, to give it to your Reverend pastor to read it also.

I.

Let us, then, speak first of the great benefit of the exercises, when they are performed in solitude, where one treats with no person but God; and first of all let us see the reason for it.

The truths of eternal life, such as the great affair of our salvation, the value of the time God gives us that we may amass merits for a happy eternity, the obligations we are under to love God for his infinite goodness and the immense love that he bears towards us—these and similar things are not seen with the eyes of the flesh, but with those of the mind. It is, on the contrary, certain that, unless our intellect represents the value of a good or the greatness of an evil to the will, we shall never embrace that good nor reject that evil. And this is the ruin of those who are attached to the world ; they live in darkness : whence it happens that, not knowing the greatness of eternal good and evil, and allured by the senses, they give themselves up to forbidden pleasure, and miserably perish.

Therefore the Holy Ghost admonishes us that in order to avoid sin we must keep before our eyes the last things that are to come upon us, that is, death, with which all the goods of this earth will come to an end for us, and the divine judgment, in which we shall have to give an account of our whole life. "Remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin" (Ecclus. vii. 40). And in another place he says: "O that they would be wise and would understand, and would provide for their last end" (Deut. xxxii. 29). By which words he wishes to give us to understand that, if men would consider the things of the other life, they would all certainly take care to sanctify themselves, and would not expose themselves to the danger of an unhappy life through all eternity. They shut their eyes to the light, and thus remaining blind, precipitate themselves into so great evils. For this reason the saints always prayed the Lord to give them light. "Enlighten my eyes, that I never sleep in death" (Ps. xii. 4). "May God cause the light of his countenance to shine upon us" (Ps. lxvi. 2). "Make the way known to me wherein I should walk" (Ps. cxliii. 8). "Give me understanding, and I will learn thy commandments" (Ps. cxviii. 73).

But to obtain this divine light we must go near to God. "Come ye to him and be enlightened" (Ps. xxxiii. 6). "For," says St. Augustine, "as we cannot see the sun without the light of the sun itself, so we cannot see the light of God but by the light of God himself" (De Sp. et An. c. 12). This light is obtained in the spiritual exercises: by them we approach to God, and God enlightens us with his light. The spiritual exercises mean nothing else than that we retire for that time from intercourse with the world, and go to converse with God alone, where God speaks to us by his inspirations, and we speak to God in our meditations, by acts of love, by repenting of our sins by which we have displeased him, by offering ourselves to serve him for the future with all our heart, and by beseeching him to make known to us his will, and to give us strength to accomplish it.

Holy Job said, "Now I should have rest in my sleep with kings and consuls of the earth, who build themselves solitudes" (Job iii. 13). Who are those kings that build themselves solitudes? They are, as St. Gregory says, those despisers of the world, who go from its tumults to render themselves fit to talk alone with God: "They build solitudes, that is, they separate themselves as far as possible from the tumult of the world, in order to be alone and to become fit to speak with God" (In Job, loc. cit.).

When Arsenius was reflecting on the means he should take to become a saint, God caused him to hear these words: "Fly, be silent, and rest." Fly from the world, be silent, cease to talk with men, and talk only with me, and thus rest in peace and solitude. In conformity with this, St. Anselm wrote to one worried by many worldly occupations, who complained that he had no moment of peace, the following advice: "Leave a little your occupations, hide yourself for a while from your tumultuous thoughts, apply yourself a little to contemplate God and rest in him ; say to God : Now teach my heart where and how I shall seek Thee, where and how I shall find Thee" (Medit. 21). Words that are applicable each and all to yourself. Fly, says he, for a short time from those earthly occupations, which render you so unquiet, and rest in retirement with God ; say to him : O Lord, show me where and how I may find Thee, that I may speak alone to Thee, and at the same time hear Thy words.

God speaks indeed to those who seek him, but he does not speak in the midst of the tumult of the world. "The Lord is not in the earthquake" (3 Kings, xix. 11), as it was said to Elias, when God called him to solitude. The voice of God, as it is said in the same place, is as "the whistling of a gentle air" (Ibid. 12), which is scarcely heard, not however by the ear of the body, but by that of the heart without noise and in a sweet rest. This is exactly what the Lord says through Osee : "I will lead her into the wilderness, and I will speak to her heart" (Osee ii. 14). When the Lord wishes to draw a soul to himself, he leads it into solitude, far from the embarrassment of the world and intercourse with men, and there speaks to it with words of fire (Ps. cxviii. 140). The words of God are said to be of fire, because they melt a soul, as the sacred spouse said : " My soul melted, when he [my beloved] spoke" (Cant. v. 6). In fact, they prepare the soul to submit readily to the direction of God, and to take that form of life which God wishes it to take ; they are words exceedingly efficacious, and so efficient, that at the very time they are heard they operate in the soul that which God requires of it.

One day the Lord said to St. Teresa, " Oh ! how willingly would I speak to many souls, but the world makes so great a noise in their hearts that my voice cannot be heard. Oh ! if they would but separate themselves a little from the world." Thus, then, my very dear friend, the Lord wishes to speak to you, but alone and in solitude ; since if he should speak to you in your own house, your parents, your friends, and your domestic occupations would continue to make a noise in your heart, and you would be unable to hear his voice. The saints have for this reason left their homes and their country, and gone to hide themselves in caverns or deserts, or at least in a cell of a religious house, there to find God and hear his words. St. Eucherius relates (Epist. ad Hil.) that a certain person, seeking a place in which she could find God, went for this purpose to ask counsel from a master of the spiritual life. The man of God led her to a solitary place, and then said: "Behold, here God may be found," without saying anything more. By this he wished to give her to understand that God is not to be found in the midst of the noise of the world, but in solitude. St. Bernard says that he learned to know God among the beech-trees and oaks better than in all the learned books he had read.

The inclination of worldlings is to be in company with friends, to talk and divert themselves; but the desire of the saints is to be in solitary places, in the midst of forests, or in caverns, there to converse alone with God, who in solitude familiarly converses with souls, as a friend with his friend. "O solitude," exclaims St. Jerome, "in which God familiarly converses with his servants!" The Venerable Vincent Caraffa said that if it had been free to him to wish for anything in this world, he would have asked for nothing but a little grotto with a piece of bread and a spiritual book, there always to live far from men and conversing alone with God. The Spouse of the Canticles praising the beauty of a soul living in solitude, compares it to the beauty of the turtle-dove: "Thy cheeks are beautiful as the turtle-dove's" (Cant. i. 9). Precisely because the turtle-dove avoids the company of other birds, and always lives in the most solitary places. Thence it is that the holy angels admire with joy the beauty and splendor which embellish on its flight to heaven a soul that in this life has lived hidden and solitary as in a desert. "Who is this that cometh up from the desert flowing with delights?" (Cant. viii. 5.)

I have wished to write all these things to you in order to inspire you with a love for holy solitude, for I hope that in the exercises that you will perform you will not have to torture your brains, as your pastor said, but that the Lord will make you taste so great a spiritual delight, that you will come out of your retreat with such an affection for them, that you will not fail hereafter to go through them every year—a thing which will be of immense advantage to your soul, whatever state of life you may choose, because in the midst of the world the various occupations, disturbances, and distractions always produce dryness of spirit, so that it is necessary from time to time to irrigate, as it were, and renew it, as St. Paul exhorts, "Be renewed in the spirit of your mind" (Ephes. iv. 23).

King David, troubled by earthly cares, wished to have wings and fly away from the bustle of the world in order to find rest: "Who will give me wings, and I will fly, and be at rest" (Ps. liv. 7). But being unable to leave the world with his body, he at least sought from time to time to disengage himself from the affairs of the realm he governed, and dwell in solitude conversing with God, and thus his spirit found peace. "I have gone far off flying away, and I abode in the wilderness" (Ibid. v. 8).

Jesus Christ also, who had no need of solitude to be recollected and united with God, but wished to set us an example, often retired from intercourse with man and went away to mountains or into deserts to pray: "Having dismissed the multitude, he went up into a mountain alone to pray" (Matt. xiv. 23): and "He retired into a desert and prayed" (Luke v. 16). And he desired that his disciples, after the fatigue of their missions, should retire to some solitary place to rest in spirit : "Come apart into a desert place, and rest a little" (Mark vi. 31) : declaring by this that the spirit, even amidst spiritual occupations, being obliged to treat with men, becomes somewhat relaxed, whence it becomes necessary to renew it in solitude.

Worldlings, who are accustomed to divert themselves in conversations, at banquets and plays, believe that in solitude, where no such things are found, one must suffer an insupportable tediousness ; and this is really the case with those who have a conscience defiled by sin ; for when they are occupied in the affairs of this world, they do not think of the things of the soul, but when they are disengaged and in solitude, as they do not seek God, they feel at once the remorse of their conscience, and thus find not peace, but tediousness and pain. But give me one who seeks God : and he shall find in solitude not tediousness, but contentment and joy. This the wise man assures us of : "For her [wisdom's] conversation hath no bitterness, nor her company any tediousness, but joy and gladness" (Wisd. viii. 16). Oh, no ; to converse with God causes no bitterness, nor tediousness but joy and peace.

Cardinal Bellarmine used during the season, when other cardinals went to divert themselves in country-seats and villas, to go to some solitary house to make the exercises during a month, and these he called his country diversions; and certainly his heart found more delight in them than all the others did in their amusements.

St. Charles Borromeo made the exercises every year, and found in them his paradise on earth; and it was whilst he was one year engaged in these exercises on Mount Varalla, that his last illness came upon him and brought him to his blessed end. For this reason St. Jerome said, that solitude was a paradise which he had discovered on earth: "Solitude is a paradise to me" (Epist. ad Rust.).

But perhaps some one will say, what contentment can a person find being alone and having no one to converse with? St. Bernard answers, "He who seeks God is by no means alone in solitude, for God himself is there with him, and renders him more content than if he had the company of the first princes of the world." "I was never less alone," writes the holy abbot, "than when I was alone" (De Vita sol.). The prophet Isaias describing the sweetness which God gives those to taste who go to seek him in solitude, says: "The Lord therefore will comfort Sion, and will comfort all the ruins thereof; and he will make her desert as a place of pleasure, and her wilderness as the garden of the Lord. Joy and gladness shall be found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of praise" (Isa. li. 3). The Lord well knows how to comfort a soul that retires from the world; he recompenses a thousand-fold all the pleasures of the world it foregoes, and makes solitude become for it a garden of delight, where, all the tumult of the world being excluded and there being only thanksgiving and praise to that God who treats it so lovingly, it finds a peace that satiates it. If there were no other contentment in solitude than that of knowing the eternal truths, this alone should be sufficient to induce us to desire it. Divine truth, when known, truly satiates the soul, and not the vanities of the world, which are but lying and deceitful things, and this is precisely that great delight which is found in the exercises made in solitude and silence. In them we see in their purest light the Christian maxims, the importance of eternal salvation, the ugliness of sin, the value of grace the love of God towards us, the vanity of the goods of this world, and the foolishness of those who, in order to acquire them, lose eternal goods and prepare for themselves an eternity of pains.

Whence it happens that the soul at the sight of these truths takes the most efficacious means to secure its eternal salvation, and rises above itself, as Jeremias says: "He shall sit solitary and hold his peace because he hath taken it up upon himself" (Lam. iii. 28). There man disengages himself from earthly affections, and unites himself to God in prayer, by the desire of belonging to him altogether, by offering himself to him, and by other repeated acts of sorrow, love, and resignation, and thus finds himself raised so high above all created things, that he laughs at those who so much prize the goods of this world which he despises, knowing them to be too little and too unworthy of the love of a heart created to love the infinite good, which is God.

It is certain that he who comes out of the exercises comes out of them much changed and better than he was when he began them. It was the opinion of St. John Chrysostom that retirement is a great help towards the acquisition of perfection. Therefore a learned author, speaking of the exercises, writes thus : " Happy the man whom Christ leads from the noise of the world to the spiritual exercises, and into the solitude filled with heavenly sweetness." Happy indeed is the man who, flying from the tumult of the world, lets the Lord lead him to the spiritual exercises, where he enjoys a solitude which gives him a foretaste of the delights of paradise. The sermons preached in churches are good, but if the hearers do not apply themselves to reflect on them, little will be the fruit that they will derive from them. Our reflections on them will never be made as they should if we do not make them in solitude. The sea-shell after having received the dew of heaven suddenly shuts itself and goes down to the bottom of the sea, and there the pearl is formed. It is an undoubted fact that what makes the fruit of the exercises perfect is our reflecting in silence (treating alone with God) on the truths heard in the sermon or read in the book. Therefore St. Vincent of Paul, in the missions he gave, always invited the hearers to perform the exercises, retired in some solitary place. One single holy maxim, well ruminated, is sufficient to make a saint. St. Francis Xavier left the world in consequence of the impression made on him by that sentence of the Gospel: "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world and suffer the loss of his own soul?" (Matt. xvi. 26.) A certain student, in consequence of one single sentiment on death, suggested to him by a good religious, changed his bad life and became virtuous. St. Clement of Ancyra was encouraged by another consideration on eternity suggested to him by his mother, namely, "The thing that we contend for is life eternal," and joyously suffered for Jesus Christ many torments inflicted on him by the tyrant.

To conceive, then, a just idea of the fruit which the exercises produce when performed in solitude, read a book on this subject, if you have one, and see there the stupendous conversions occasioned by them. I will here mention a few.

Father Maffei relates that there was in Siena a priest who gave public scandal. This priest having made the exercises with a missionary who passed by accident through Siena, was not only converted and made a good confession, but on a certain day, whilst a great number of people were present in the church, he went into the pulpit weeping, and having a cord round his neck, and asked pardon for all the scandals that he had given; and after this he went away to become a Capuchin and died as a saint. On his death-bed he confessed that for all the graces he had received he was indebted to those spiritual exercises.

Moreover, Father Bartoli relates of a certain German knight, who had given himself up to all kinds of vice,—so far as to give his soul to the devil by a written contract signed with his own blood,—that having afterwards performed the exercises, he conceived so great a sorrow for his sins that he fainted several times, and thenceforth he continued to lead a penitential life as long as he lived.

Father Rossignoli relates that in Sicily a son of a certain baron became so debauched, that his father, after having tried without effect many means to correct him, was obliged to put him in chains in a galley with the slaves. But a certain good religious, moved by compassion, went to see him, and by his winning manners and good advice induced him to meditate on certain eternal truths in the galley where he was confined. The young man having done so, wished to make a general confession, and showed such a change in his conduct, that his father with much joy received him again into his house, and never afterwards had any reason to be displeased with him.

Another youth of Flanders, having made the exercises and being converted by them from a most wicked life he had been leading, said afterwards to his companions, who were wondering at this : " You wonder at me ; but I tell you that the devil himself, if he could make the exercises, would be brought to penance."

Another, a religious, but of such bad conduct that he had rendered himself insupportable to all, was by his superiors sent to make the exercises. Being about to leave, he jestingly said to his friends : " Keep your beds ready to touch my body when I come back." But after the exercises he was so much changed that he became an example to all the other religious, who seeing this change, wished to make them also.

Certain young men seeing other young men, their friends, going to make the exercises, wished to accompany them, not to profit, but to jest afterwards in their conversations about their devotions. But exactly the contrary happened ; for during the exercises they were filled with such compunction that they all began to sigh and weep, confessed their sins, and changed their lives.

I could adduce such facts by thousands, but I shall relate only one more—tha of a nun in the monastery of Torre di Specchi in Rome, who pretended to learning, but led a very imperfect life. This nun began, though with a bad will, to assist at the exercises that were given in the monastery; but the first meditation she made on the end of man made such an impression on her, that she began to weep, went to her spiritual Father, and said to him: "Father, I wish to become a saint, and this promptly." She wanted to say more, but the tears prevented her from speaking. Having then retired to her cell, she made a writing by which she gave herself entirely to Jesus Christ, and began to lead a penitent and retired life, in which she persevered until death.

But when we see the esteem in which the exercises have been held by so many holy men, this, if we had no other reason, should be enough to make us prize them highly. St. Charles Borromeo, from the first time that he made the spiritual exercises in Rome, began to lead a perfect life. St. Francis de Sales confessed that it was to the exercises he owed the beginning of his holy life. Father Louis of Granada, a holy man, said that his whole life would not suffice to explain the knowledge of heavenly things he had received in making the spiritual exercises. Father Avila called the exercises a school of heavenly wisdom, and wished that all his spiritual children should go to make them. Father Louis Blossius, a Benedictine, said that we should give to God special thanks for having in these latter times made known to his Church this treasure of the exercises.

II.

But if the exercises are of a great help to persons in every state or condition, they are of an especial help to him who wishes to make the choice of the state of life he should embrace. For I find it stated that the first end for which the exercises were instituted was that of making the choice of a state of life, because upon this choice depends the eternal salvation of each one. We cannot expect that an angel from heaven should come to assure us of the state which according to the will of God we should choose. It is sufficient to place before our eyes the state we think of choosing, and then we should consider the end we have in view in that choice, and weigh all the circumstances of the case.

This is the principal reason for which I wish you to make the exercises in silence, namely, for making the choice of the state of life. When, then, you have entered upon the exercises, as I hope you will, I beg of you to follow the advice I am going to subjoin.

1. The only intention that you should have in making these exercises is that you may know what God will have you to do; and therefore in going to that solitary house, say within yourself: "I will hear what the Lord God will speak in me" (Ps. lxxxiv. 9). I go to know what the Lord shall tell me and what he wishes from me.

2. Besides, it is necessary that you have a determined will to obey God, and to follow without reserve the vocation he shall make known to you.

3. It is moreover necessary that you pray earnestly to the Lord, that he may make known to you his will, namely, in what state of life he wishes you to live. But remember that in order to obtain this light you should pray with indifference of mind. He who prays to God to enlighten him on his state of life, but does so without this indifference, and, instead of wishing to conform to the will of God, wishes rather that God should conform to his own will, is like a pilot who feigns to will but indeed wills not that his vessel advance, since he casts the anchor and then hoists the sail. God does not enlighten or speak to such a person. But if you will supplicate him with this indifference and the resolution to accomplish his will, he will make you see clearly the state that is best for you. And if you should then feel any repugnance to it, you should place before your eyes the hour of your death, and reflect which state you would in that hour wish to have embraced, and then embrace that.

4. Take with you to your house of retreat a book containing the meditations which are commonly made during the exercises; read these meditations, and let them be instead of sermons, reflecting on them for half an hour as well in the morning as in the evening. Take also with you the lives of some of the saints or some other spiritual book out of which to make your reading; and these should be your only companions in solitude during the eight days.

5. It is also necessary, in order to obtain that light and to hear what the Lord will speak to you, to avoid every distraction. "Be still, and see that I am God" (Ps. xlv. 11). To hear the divine voice we must cease all intercourse with the world. To a sick man no remedies will be of any use if he does not take them with the proper precaution, as avoiding exposure to the cold air, unwholesome food, or too much application of mind. In the same manner, in order that the exercises may be useful for the health of your soul, you must remove hurtful distractions, such as receiving visits from friends, messages from without, or letters which are sent to you. St. Francis de Sales, when he was engaged in the exercises, laid aside all the letters he received, and did not read them until after the exercises. It is also necessary to read no books of amusement and not even of study; for then we ought to study only the crucifix. Therefore have in your room none but spiritual books, and, reading in them, read not for curiosity's sake, but only for this one end, namely, to decide on the state of life which God will make known to you as the one he wishes you to embrace.

6. Moreover, it is not enough to avoid distractions from without; you must also avoid those from within: for if you should there deliberately allow your mind to think on the things of the world, or of study, or the like, the exercises and the solitude will be of little use to you. St. Gregory says, "What avails the solitude of the body if the solitude of the heart is wanting?" (Mor. l. 30, c. 23.) Peter Ortiz, an envoy of Charles V., wished to go to the monastery of Monte Casino to make the exercises. Having arrived at the door of the monastery he said to his thoughts what our Lord said to his disciples, "Sit ye here till I go yonder and pray" (Matt. xxvi. 36). Thoughts of the world, wait here outside. Having finished the exercises, I shall again see you, and we will again talk together. Whilst one is engaged in the exercises he ought to make use of the time only for the good of his soul, without losing any moment of it. Finally, I beg of you to recite during the exercises the following short prayer:

My God, I am that miserable one, who in the past have despised Thee, but now I esteem and love Thee above everything, nor will I love any other but Thee. Thou wouldst have me belong entirely to Thee; to Thee I will belong entirely. "Speak, O Lord, for Thy servant heareth" (1 Kings iii. 10). Let me know what Thou wishest from me, and I will do all; and let me especially know in what state Thou wishest me to serve Thee. "Make the way known to me wherein I should walk" (Psa. cxliii. 8).

During the exercises recommend yourself also in an especial manner to the divine mother Mary, praying her to obtain for you the grace perfectly to accomplish the will of her Son.

And do not forget, when you make the exercises, to recommend me to Jesus Christ, as I will not omit to do in a particular manner for you, that he may make you a saint, as I heartily wish. In which sentiment I protest myself to be your most devoted and obliged servant, etc.

The Vocation to the Priesthood.

I. Necessity of a Divine Vocation to take Holy Orders.

TO enter any state of life a divine vocation is necessary; for without such a vocation it is, if not impossible, at least most difficult, to fulfil the obligations of our state, and obtain salvation. But if for all states a vocation is necessary, it is necessary in a particular manner for the ecclesiastical state. "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up another way, the same is a thief and a robber" (John x. 1). Hence he who takes holy Orders without a call from God is convicted of theft, in taking by force a dignity which God does not wish to bestow upon him. "Robbers and thieves," says St. Cyril of Alexandria, "such are the names of those that dare to adjudge to themselves a grace that heaven does not offer them" (In Jo. x. 10). And before him St. Paul said the same thing: "Neither doth any man take the honor to himself, but he that is called by God, as Aaron was. So Christ also did not glorify himself that he might be made a high priest; but he that said unto him: Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee" (Heb. v. 4, 5).

No one, then, however learned, prudent, and holy he may be, can thrust himself into the sanctuary unless he is first called and introduced by God. Jesus Christ himself, who among all men was certainly the most learned and the most holy, "full of grace and truth" (John i. 14), "in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (Col. ii. 3),—Jesus Christ, I say, required a divine call in order to assume the dignity of the priesthood.

In entering the sanctuary, even after God himself had called them to it, the saints trembled. When his bishop ordered St. Augustine to receive ordination, the saint through humility regarded the command as a chastisement of his sins. "They have forced me, in punishment of my sins" (Epist. 21, E. B.). To escape the priesthood St. Ephrem of Syria feigned madness; and St. Ambrose pretended to be a man of a cruel disposition.

To avoid the priesthood, St. Ammonius

the Monk cut off his ears and threatened to pluck out his tongue if the persons who pressed him to take holy Orders should continue to molest him. In a word, St. Cyril of Alexandria says, "The saints have dreaded the dignity of the priesthood, as a burden of enormous weight" (De Fest. pasch. hom. 1). Can any one, then, says St. Cyprian, be so daring as to attempt of himself, and without a divine call, to assume the priesthood? (Epist. 55.)

As a vassal who would of himself take the office of minister should violate the authority of his sovereign, so he who intrudes himself into the sanctuary without a vocation violates the authority of God. How great should be the temerity of the subject who, without the appointment, and even in opposition to the will of the monarch, should attempt to administer the royal patrimony, to decide lawsuits, to command the army, and to assume the viceregal authority! "Among you," asks St. Bernard in speaking to clerics, "is there any one so insolent as, without orders and contrary to the will of the pettiest monarch, to assume the direction of his affairs?" (De Conv. ad cler. c. 19.) And are not priests, as St. Prosper says, the administrators of the royal house? (De Vita cont. l. 2, c. 2.) Are they not, according to St. Ambrose, the "leaders and rectors of the flock of Christ" (De Dign. sac. c. 2), according to St. John Chrysostom, the "interpreters of the divine judgments," and according to St. Denis, the "vicars of Christ"? (Hom. 17.) Will any one who knows all this dare to become the minister of God without a divine call?

To think of exercising royal authority is, according to St. Peter Chrysologus, criminal in a subject (Serm. 23). To intrude into the house of a private individual, in order to dispose of his goods and to manage his business, would be considered temerity; for even a private individual has the right of appointing the administrators of his affairs. And will you, says St. Bernard, without being called or introduced by God, intrude into his house to take charge of his interests and to dispose of his goods? (De Vita cler. c. 5.)

The Council of Trent has declared that the Church regards not as her minister, but as a robber, the man who audaciously assumes the priesthood without a vocation (Sess. xxiii. c. 4). Such priests may labor and toil, but their labors shall profit them little before God. On the contrary, the works that are meritorious in others shall deserve chastisement for them. Should a servant who is commanded by his master to take care of the house, through his own caprice labor in cultivating the vineyard, he may toil and sweat, but instead of being rewarded he shall be chastised by his master. Thus, in the first place, because they are not conformable to the divine will, the Lord shall not accept the toils of the man who, without a vocation, intrudes himself into the priesthood. "I have no pleasure in you, saith the Lord of Hosts, and I will not receive a gift of your hand" (Mal. i. 10). In the end God will not reward, but will punish, the works of the priest who has entered the sanctuary without a vocation. "What stranger soever cometh to it [the tabernacle] shall be slain" (Num. i. 51).

Whosoever, then, aspires to holy Orders must, in the first place, carefully examine whether his vocation is from God. "For," says St. John Chrysostom, "since this dignity is great, it must be approved by a divine sentence, so that only the one that is worthy may be admitted thereto" (In 1 Tim. hom. 5). Now, to know whether his call is from God, he should examine the marks of a divine vocation. He, says St.

Luke, who wishes to build a tower first computes the necessary expenses, in order to know if he has the means of completing the edifice (Luke xiv. 28).

II. Marks of a Divine Vocation to the Sacerdotal State.

LET us now see what are the marks of a divine vocation to the sacerdotal state.

Nobility is not a mark of a divine vocation. To know, says St. Jerome, whether a person should become the guide of the people in what regards their eternal salvation, we must consider not nobility of blood, but sanctity of life (In Tit. 1). St. Gregory says the same: "By one's conduct, not by one's high birth, is one's vocation to be proved."

Nor is the will of parents a mark of a divine vocation. In inducing a child to take priesthood they seek not his spiritual welfare, but their own interest, and the advancement of the family. "How many mothers," says St. John Chrysostom, or the author of the Imperfect Work, "have eyes only for the bodies of their children and disdain their souls! To see them happy here below is all that they desire ; as for the punishments that perhaps their children are to endure in the next life, they do not even think of them" (Hom. 35). We must be persuaded, as Jesus Christ has said, that with regard to the choice of a state of life we have no enemies more dangerous than our own relatives. "And a man's enemies shall be they of his own household" (Matt. x. 36). Hence the Redeemer adds: "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me" (Matt. x. 37). Oh! how many priests shall we see condemned on the day of judgment for having taken holy Orders to please their relatives.

When a young man, in obedience to the call of God, wishes to become a religious, what efforts do not his parents make, either through passion or for the interest of the family, to dissuade him from following his vocation! It is necessary to know that, according to the common opinion of theologians, this cannot be excused from mortal sin. See what I have written on this subject in my Moral Theology (l. 4, n. 77). Parents who act in this manner are guilty of a double sin. They sin first against charity, because they are the cause of a grievous evil to the child whom God has called to religion. A person who dissuades even a stranger from following a religious vocation is guilty of a grievous sin. They sin, secondly, against piety; for by their obligation to educate a child they are bound to promote his greatest spiritual welfare. Some ignorant confessors tell their penitents who wish to become religious, that in this they should obey their parents, and abandon their vocation if their parents object to their entering religion. These confessors adopt the opinion of Luther, who taught that a person sins by entering religion without the consent of his parents. But the doctrine of Luther was rejected by the holy Fathers, and by the Tenth Council of Toledo, in which it was decreed that children who had attained their fourteenth year may lawfully enter religion even against the will of their parents. A child is bound to obey his parents in what regards his education and the government of the house; but with regard to the choice of a state of life, he should obey God by embracing the state to which God calls him. When parents seek to be obeyed in this matter we must answer them in the words of the apostles to the princes of the Jews: "If it be just in the sight of God to hear you rather than God, judge ye" (Acts iv. 19).

St. Thomas expressly teaches that in the choice of a state of life children are not obliged to obey their parents. And the saint says that when there is question of a vocation to religion, a person is not bound even to consult his relatives; for on such occasions self-interest changes relatives into enemies (Contra retr. a. rel. c. 9). Parents are, as St. Bernard says, content to see their children damned with them, rather than see them saved by entering religion and separating from the family (Epist. iii.). But when a person wishes to enter the sacerdotal state, in which he may be able to serve the family, what efforts do not his parents make to procure his ordination, either by lawful or unlawful means, whether he is called or not called to the priesthood! And with what severity do they not treat him if, through remorse of conscience, he refuse to take holy Orders! Barbarous fathers! Let us, with St. Bernard, call them not parents, but murderers! Unhappy fathers! miserable children! I say again. How many shall we see condemned in the valley of Josaphat for having interfered with the vocation of others, or for not having attended to their own ! For, as we shall hereafter demonstrate, the salvation of each individual depends on following the divine call.

But let us return to our subject. Neither nobility of birth nor the will of parents is a mark of a vocation to the priesthood ; nor is talent or fitness for the offices of a priest a sign of vocation, for along with talent a holy life and a divine call are necessary..

What, then, are the marks of a divine vocation to the ecclesiastical state ? There are three principal marks :

1. Purity of Intention.

The first is a good intention. It is necessary to enter the sanctuary by the door, but there is no other door than Jesus Christ : " I am the door of the sheep. . . . If any man enter in, he shall be saved " (John x. 7, 9). To enter, then, by the door is to become a priest not to please relatives, nor to advance the family, nor for the sake of self-interest or self-esteem, but to serve God, to propagate his glory, and to save souls. " If any one," says a wise theologian, the learned continuator of Tournely, " presents himself for holy Orders without any vicious affection, and with the sole desire to be employed in the service of God and in the salvation of his neighbor, he, we may believe, is called by God" (De Ord. q. 4, a. 4). Another author asserts that he who is impelled by ambition, interest, or a motive of his own glory, is called not by God, but by the devil (Hall. p. 1, s. 3, c. 2, § 4). "But," adds St. Anselm, "he who enters the priesthood through so unworthy motives shall receive not a blessing, but a malediction from God" (In Heb. 5).

2. Science and Talents.

The second mark is the talent and learning necessary for the fulfilment of the duties of a priest. Priests must be masters to teach the people the law of God. "For the lips of the priest shall keep knowledge, and they shall seek the law at his mouth" (Mal. ii. 7). Sidonius Apollinarius used to say: "Ignorant physicians are the cause of many deaths" (Lib. 2, ep. 12). And ignorant priests, particularly a confessor who teaches false doctrines and gives bad counsels, will be the ruin of many souls; because, in consequence of being a priest, his errors are easily believed. Hence Ivone Carnotensis has written: "No one should be admitted to holy Orders unless he has given sufficient proofs of good conduct and learning."

A priest must not only have a competent knowledge of all the rubrics necessary for the celebration of Mass, but must be also acquainted with the principal things that regard the sacrament of penance. It is true, that every priest is not obliged to hear confessions, unless there is great necessity for his assistance in the district in which he lives; however, every priest is bound to be acquainted with what a priest must ordinarily know in order to be able to hear the confessions of dying persons; that is, he is bound to know when he has faculties to absolve, when and how he ought to give absolution to the sick, whether conditionally or absolutely; what obligation he ought to impose on them, if they are under any censure. He should also know at least the general principles of Moral Theology.

3. Positive Goodness of Character.

The third mark of an ecclesiastical vocation is positive virtue.

Hence, in the first place, the person who is to be ordained should be a man of innocent life, and should not be contaminated by sins. The apostle requires that they who are to be ordained priests should be free from every crime. In ancient times a person who had committed a single mortal sin could never be ordained, as we learn from the First Council of Nice (Can. 9). And St. Jerome says that it was not enough for a person to be free from sin at the time of his ordination, but that it was, moreover, necessary that he should not have fallen into mortal sin since the time of his baptism (In Tit. 1). It is true that this rigorous discipline has ceased in the Church, but it has been always at least required that he who had fallen into grievous sins should purify his conscience for a considerable time before his ordination. This we may infer from a letter to the Archbishop of Rheims, in which Alexander III. commanded that a deacon who had wounded another deacon, if he sincerely repented of his sin, might, after being absolved, and after performing the penance enjoined, be permitted again to exercise his Order; and that if he afterwards led a perfect life, he might be promoted to priesthood (Cap. 1, De diacono. Qui cler.) He, then, who finds himself bound by a habit of any vice cannot take any holy Order without incurring the guilt of mortal sin. "I am horrified," says St. Bernard (Epist. 8), "when I think whence thou comest, whither thou goest, and what a short penance thou hast put between thy sins and thy ordination. However, it is indispensable that thou do not undertake to purify the conscience of others before thou purifiest thy own." Of those daring sinners who, though full of bad habits, take priesthood, an ancient author, Gildas, says, "It is not to the priesthood that they should be admitted, but they should be dragged to the pillory" (Cast. in eccl. ord.). They, then, says St. Isidore, who are still subject to the habit of any sin should not be promoted to holy Orders (Sent. l. 3, c. 34).

But he who intends to ascend the altar must not only be free from sin, but must have also begun to walk in the path of perfection, and have acquired a habit of virtue. In our Moral Theology (l. 6, n. 63, et seq.) we have shown in a distinct dissertation (and this is the common opinion) that if a person in the habit of any vice wish to be ordained it is not enough for him to have the dispositions necessary for the sacrament of penance, but that he must also have the dispositions required for receiving the sacrament of order; otherwise he is unfit for both: and should he receive absolution with the intention of taking Orders without the necessary dispositions, he and the confessor who absolves him shall be guilty of a grievous sin. For it is not enough for those who wish to take holy Orders to have left the state of sin: they must also, according to the words of Alexander III. (si perfectæ vitæ et conversationis fuerit), cited in the preceding paragraph, have the positive virtue necessary for the ecclesiastical state. From the words of the Pontiff we learn that a person who has done penance may exercise an order already received, but he who has only done penance cannot take a higher order. The angelic Doctor teaches the same doctrine: "Sanctity is required for the reception of holy Orders, and we must place the sublime burden of the priesthood only upon walls already dried by sanctity; that is, freed from the malignant humor of sin" (2. 2, q. 189, a. 1). This is conformable to what St. Denis wrote long before: "Let no one be so bold as to propose himself to others as their guide in the things of God, if he has not first, with all his power, transformed himself into God to the point of perfect resemblance to him" (De Eccl. Hier. c. 3). For this St. Thomas adduces two reasons: the first is, that as he who takes Orders is raised above seculars in dignity, so he should be superior to them in sanctity (Suppl. q. 35, a. 1). The second reason is, that by his ordination a priest is appointed to exercise the most sublime ministry on the altar, for which greater sanctity is required than for the religious state (2. 2, 9, 184, a. 8).

Hence the Apostle forbade Timothy to ordain neophytes; that is, according to St. Thomas, neophytes in perfection as well as neophytes in age. Hence the Council of Trent, in reference to the words of Scripture, "And a spotless life in old age" (Wisd. iv. 9), prescribes to the bishops to admit to ordination only those who show themselves worthy by a conduct full of wise maturity (Sess. xxiii. c. 12). And of this positive virtue it is necessary, according to St. Thomas, to have not a doubtful but a certain knowledge (Suppl. q. 36, a. 4). This, according to St. Gregory, is particularly necessary with regard to the virtue of chastity: "No one should be admitted to the ministry of the altar unless an assurance has been given of his perfect chastity" (Lib. 1, ep. 42). With regard to chastity, the holy Pontiff required a proof of many years (Lib. 3, ep. 26).

From this we may infer that God will demand a terrible account of the parish priest who gives to persons aspiring to the priesthood a testimony of their having frequented the sacraments and led exemplary lives, though they had neglected the frequentation of the sacraments, and had given scandal rather than good example. Such parish priests by these false attestations, given not through charity, as they pretend, but against the charity due to God and the Church, render themselves guilty of all the sins that shall be afterwards committed by the bad priests who were ordained in consequence of these testimonials. For in this matter bishops trust to the testimony of parish priests, and are deceived. Nor should a parish priest in giving such attestations trust the testimony of others: he cannot give them unless he is certain that what he attests is true, namely, that the ecclesiastic has really led an exemplary life, and has frequented the sacraments. And as a bishop cannot ordain any person unless he be a man of approved chastity, so a confessor cannot permit an incontinent penitent to receive ordination without having a moral certainty that he is free from the bad habit which he had contracted, and that he had acquired a habit of the virtue of chastity.

III. To what Dangers one exposes One's Self by taking Holy Orders without a Vocation.

FROM what has been said, it follows that he who takes holy Orders without the marks of a vocation cannot be excused from the guilt of grievous sin. This is the doctrine of many theologians,—of Habert, of Natalis Alexander, of Juenin, and of the continuator of Tournely. And before them St. Augustine taught the same. Speaking of the chastisement inflicted on Core, Dathan, and Abiron, who, without being called, attempted to exercise the sacerdotal functions, the holy Doctor said: "God struck them that they might serve as an example, and thus to warn off him who would dare to assume a sacred charge. Indeed, this is the chastisement reserved for those who would thrust themselves into the office of bishop, priest, or deacon" (Serm. 30, E. B. app.). And the reason is, first, because he who thrusts himself into the sanctuary without a divine call cannot be excused from grievous presumption; secondly, because he shall be deprived of the congruous and abundant helps, without which, as Habert writes, he shall be absolutely unable to comply with the obligations of his state, but shall fulfil them only with great difficulty. He will be like a dislocated member, which can be used only with difficulty, and which causes deformity (De Ord. p. 3, c. 1, § 2).

Hence Bishop Abelly writes: "He who of himself, without inquiring whether he has a vocation or not, thrusts himself into the priesthood will no doubt expose himself to the great danger of losing his soul; for he commits against the Holy Spirit that sin for which, as the Gospel says, there is hardly or very rarely any pardon" (Sac. chr. p. 1, c. 4).

The Lord has declared that his wrath is provoked against those who wish to rule in his Church without being called by him. On this passage St. Gregory says, "It is by themselves and not by the will of the Supreme Head that they reign" (Os. viii. 4).

Divine vocation is entirely wanting to them, and they have followed only the ardor of vile cupidity, not certainly to accept, but to usurp this sublime dignity (Past. p. 1, c. 1). How many intrigues, adulations, entreaties, and other means do certain persons employ in order to procure ordination, not in obedience to the call of God, but through earthly motives! But woe to such men, says the Lord by the prophet Isaias: "Woe to you, apostate children, . . . that you would take counsel, and not of me" (Isa. xxx. 1). On the day of judgment they shall claim a reward, but Jesus Christ shall cast them off. "Many will say to me in that day, Have we not prophesied in thy name [by preaching and teaching], and cast out devils in thy name [by absolving penitent sinners], and done many miracles in thy name [by correcting the wicked, by settling disputes, by converting sinners]? And then will I profess unto them: I never knew you; depart from me, you that work iniquity" (Matt. vii. 22, 23). Priests who have not been called are indeed workmen and ministers of God, because they have received the sacerdotal character; but they are ministers of iniquity and rapine, because they have of their own will, and without vocation, in-truded themselves into the sheepfold. They have not, as St. Bernard says (De Conv. ad cler. c. 19), received the keys, but have taken them by force. They toil, but God will not accept; he will, on the contrary, punish their works and labors because they have not entered the sanctuary by the straight path. "The labor of fools shall afflict them that know not how to go to the city" (Eccles. x. 15). The Church, says St. Leo, receives only those whom the Lord chooses, and by his election makes fit to be his ministers (In die ass. suæ, s. 2). But, on the other hand, the Church rejects those whom, as St. Peter Damian has written, God has not called; for instead of promoting her welfare, they commit havoc among her members; and instead of edifying, they contaminate and destroy her children (Cont. cler. aul. c. 3).

"Whom he [the Lord] shall choose, they shall approach to him" (Num. xvi. 5). God will gladly admit into his presence all whom he has called to the priesthood, and will cast off the priest whom he has not chosen. St. Ephrem regards as lost the man who is so daring as to take the order of priesthood without a vocation. "I am astonished," he says, "at that which those fools dare to do, who, without the grace of vocation through Christ, full of boldness, seek to insinuate themselves into the office of the priesthood. Miserable beings, that know not that they are preparing for themselves an eternal fire" (Or. de Sacerd.). And Peter de Blois has written: "What ruin does not the bold man prepare for himself who of the sacrifice makes a sacrilege, and of life an instrument of death!" (Ep. 123.) He who errs in his vocation exposes himself to greater danger than if he transgressed particular precepts; for if he violates a particular command, he may rise from his fall, and begin again to walk in the right path, but he who errs in his vocation mistakes the way itself. Hence the longer he travels in it, the more distant he is from his home. To him we may justly apply the words of St. Augustine: "You run well, but on the wrong road."

It is necessary to be persuaded of the truth of what St. Gregory says, that our eternal salvation depends principally on embracing the state to which God has called us (De Sing. cler.). The reason is evident: for it is God that destines, according to the order of his Providence, his state of life for each individual, and according to the state to which he calls him, prepares for him abundant graces and suitable helps. "In the distribution of graces," says St. Cyprian, "the Holy Spirit takes into consideration his own plan, and not our caprices." And according to the Apostle: "And whom he predestinated, them he also called. And whom he called, them he also justified" (Rom. viii. 30). Thus to vocation succeeds justification, and to justification, glory; that is, the attainment of eternal life. He then, who does not obey the call of God shall neither be justified nor glorified. Father Granada justly said that vocation is the main wheel of our entire life. As in a clock, if the main wheel be spoiled, the entire clock is injured, so, says St. Gregory Nazianzen, if a person err in his vocation his whole life will be full of errors; for in the state to which God has not called him he will be deprived of the helps by which he can with facility lead a good life.

"Every one," says St. Paul, "hath his proper gift from God; one after this manner, and another after that" (1 Cor. vii. 7). The meaning of this passage, according to St. Thomas and other commentators, is, that the Lord gives to each one graces to fulfil with ease the obligations of the state to which he calls him. "God," says the angelic Doctor, "gives to every man not only certain aptitudes, but also all that is necessary to exercise them" (Suppl. q. 35, a. 1). And in another place he writes: "God does not destine men to such or such a vocation without favoring them with gifts at the same time, and preparing them in such a way as to render them capable of fulfilling the duties of their vocation; for, says St. Paul: 'Our sufficiency is from God, who also hath made us fit ministers of the New Testament'" (2 Cor. iii. 5, 6.—P. 3, q. 27, a. 4). As each person, then, will be able to discharge with facility the office to which God elects him, so he will be unfit for the fulfilment of the office to which God does not call him. The foot, which is given to enable us to walk, cannot see; the eye, which is given to see, is incapable of hearing; and how shall he who is not chosen by God to the priesthood be able to discharge its obligations?

It belongs to the Lord to choose the workmen who are to cultivate his vineyard: "I have chosen you, . . . and have appointed you that you should go, and should bring forth fruit" (John xv. 16). Hence the Redeemer did not say, Beg of men to go and gather the harvest; but he tells us to ask the master of the crop to send workmen to collect it (Luke x. 2). Hence he also said: "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you" (John xx. 21). When God calls, he himself, says St. Leo, gives the necessary helps (In die ass. sue, s. 1). This is what Jesus Christ has said: "I am the door. By me if any man enter in he shall be saved, and he shall go in, and go out, and shall find pastures" (John x. 9). "He shall go in:" what the priest called by God undertakes, he shall easily accomplish without sin, and with merit. "And shall go out:" he shall be in the midst of perils and occasions of sin, but with the divine aid he shall readily escape injury. "And shall find pastures:" finally, in consequence of being in the state in which God has placed him, he will be assisted in all the duties of his ministry by special graces, which will make him advance in perfection. Hence he will be able to say with confidence "The Lord ruleth me. and I shall want nothing. He hath set me in a place of pasture" (Ps. xxii. 1).

But priests whom God has not sent to work in his Church he shall abandon to eternal ignominy and destruction. "I have not sent these prophets," says the Lord by the prophet Jeremias, "yet they ran." He afterwards adds: "Therefore I will take you and carry you away, and will forsake you; . . . and I will bring an everlasting reproach upon you, and a perpetual shame which shall never be forgotten" (Jer. xxiii. 21, 39-40).

In order to be raised to the sublimity of the priesthood it is necessary, as St. Thomas says, for a man "to be exalted and elevated by divine power above the natural order of things" (Habert, de Ord. p. 3, c. 1, § 2), because he is appointed the sanctifier of the people, and the vicar of Jesus Christ. But in him who raises himself to so great a dignity shall be verified the words of the Wise Man: "There is that hath appeared a fool after he was lifted up on high" (Prov. xxx. 32). Had he remained in the world, he should perhaps have been a virtuous layman; but having become a priest without a vocation, he will be a bad priest, and instead of promoting the interest of religion, he will do great injury to the Church. Of such priests the Roman Catechism says: "Such ministers are for the Church of God the gravest embarrassment and the most terrible scourge" (P. 2, c. 7, q. 3). And what good can be expected from the priest who has entered the sanctuary without a vocation? "It is impossible," says St. Leo, "that a work so badly begun should finish well" (Epist. 87). St. Laurence Justinian has written: "What fruit, I ask, can come from a corrupted root?" (De Compunct.) Our Saviour has said, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up" (Matt. xv. 13). Hence Peter de Blois writes that when God permits a person to be ordained without a vocation, the permission is not a grace, but a chastisement. For a tree which has not taken deep root, when exposed to the tempest shall soon fall and be cast into the fire (De inst. ep. c. 3). And St. Bernard says that he who has not lawfully entered the sanctuary shall continue to be unfaithful; and instead of procuring the salvation of souls, he shall be the cause of their death and perdition (De Vita cler. c. 7). This is conformable to the doctrine of Jesus Christ: "He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, . . . the same is a thief and a robber" (John x. 1).

Some may say, if they only were admitted to orders who have the marks of vocation which have been laid down as indispensable, there should be but few priests in the Church, and the people should be left without the necessary helps. But to this the Fourth Council of Lateran has answered: "It is much better to confer the priesthood on a small number of virtuous clerics than to have a large number of bad priests" (Cap. 27). And St. Thomas says that God never abandons his Church so as to leave her in want of fit ministers to provide for the necessity of the people (Suppl. q. 36, a. 4). St. Leo justly says that to provide for the wants of the people by bad priests would be not to save but to destroy them (Epist. 87).

If, then, a priest has been ordained without a vocation, what must he do? Must he look on himself as lost? must he abandon himself to despair? No. St. Gregory has asked the same question. He answers: "He must lament." Behold what such a priest must do if he wish to save his soul: "He must lament;" he must weep, and seek to appease the anger of God by tears and by repentance, and to move him to pardon the great sin that he committed in thrusting himself into the sanctuary without a divine call. He must, as St. Bernard exhorts, endeavor to attain after his ordination the sanctity of life which ought to precede it. He must change his conduct, his conversation and pursuits. "Let all be holy—your life and your works" (Epist. 27), continues the saint. If he is ignorant, he must study; if he has spent his time in worldly conversations and amusements, he must change them into meditations, spiritual reading, and visits to the churches. But to do this he must use violence to himself; for, as has been already said, since he has entered the sanctuary without a vocation, he is but a dislocated member, and therefore he must work out his salvation with great difficulty and great labor. But if, in consequence of having become a priest without a divine call, he is, as has been shown, bereft of the helps necessary to enable him to discharge with facility the obligations of the priesthood, how shall he without these helps fulfil the sacerdotal duties? Habert (De Ord. p. 3, c. 1, § 2) and the continuator of Tournely (De Oblig. cler. c. 1, a. 1, concl. 3) say, let him pray, and by his prayers he shall obtain that assistance which he does not deserve. This is conformable to the doctrine of the Council of Trent: "God commands not impossibilities, but, by commanding, both admonishes thee to do what thou art able, and to pray for what thou art not able [to do], and aids thee that thou mayest be able" (Sess. 6, cap. 11).

Date Loaned

APR 23 1971

120

5/17

USE FOR ONE MONTH

JUN 18 1975

JE 30 98

XD5

L72

Liguori, A.

AUTHOR

The Religious State

TITLE

DATE
LOANED

Jan. 2

The Library
Union Theological Seminary
Broadway at 120th Street
New York 27, N. Y.

THE BURKE LIBRARY

5 0312 908

